FINE ELECTRO-PLATE.

CAUTION.—We call attention to the fact that IMITATIONS of our fine ELECTRO-PLATE, consisting of Dinner, Dessert, Tea Services, &c., are extensively produced by American Manufacturers; also, that there are English imitations in market, both of inferior quality. These goods are offered for sale by many dealers and are well calculated to deceive. Purchasers can only detect and guard against counterfeits by noting our trade-mark, thus:

Trade Mark for Electro-Plate — GORHAM MFG CO — Stamped on base of every article.

Our goods, which can be obtained from all responsible dealers, bear this stamp. They are heavily plated on fine Nickel Silver, AND WE CLAIM THAT THEY ARE IN EVERY RESPECT SUPERIOR TO THE BEST SHEFFIELD PLATE.

THE WORLD ALMANAC FOR 186

Eclipses in 1868.

In the year 1868 there will be two eclipses, both of the Sun, and a transit of Mercury over the Sun's disc.

I. An annular eclipse of the Sun, February 22, invisible in the United States, but visible in South America, Africa, and a small portion of Europe.

II. A total eclipse of the Sun, August 17th, invisible in the United States. This eclipse will be visible in portions of Asia and Africa and in Australia.

III. A transit of Mercury over the Sun's disc, November 4th, invisible in the United States, but partly visible in Europe.

NOTE.—It will be observed that none of the eclipses for 1868 are visible in the United States.

Table of Sixty-one Bright Stars.

To ascertain when any star or constellation found in the following Table will be on the meridian, add the numbers opposite in the left hand column of figures to the time of "Sidereal Noon," found in the calendar pages. For the RISING of a star, subtract the number opposite in the right-hand column of figures from its meridian passage. For the setting of a star, add the same number to its meridian passage. Those marked (....) revolve in a circle of perpetual apparition, and do not rise nor set north of the latitude of New York (40° 42′ 40″), for which latitude the semi-diurnal arcs are calculated. The civil day begins at the preceding midnight, and consequently 24 hours after midnight, or 12 hours from noon is morning of the succeeding day; and hours to 36 hours from noon is evening of the next day. The table is arranged in the order of culmination.

The Planets.

MERCURY will be brightest and at the most favorable situation for visibility about Feb. 17th, June 13th and Oct. 9th, being then in the west and evening star soon after sun-set; also, April 7th, Aug. 6th and Nov. 24th, in the east as morning star, just before sun-rise.

VENUS will be the evening star until July 16th, then morning star until the end of the year. It will be at its greatest brilliancy about June 9th, and may often some days before and after that late be seen during the afternoon with the naked eye, crossing the meridian about 3 o'clock, P. M.; again, after passing the inferior conjunction, and becoming morning star. It attains its greatest brilliancy about August 21st, and may be seen in the forenoon about 2 h. ¾ in advance of the Sun.

MARS will be morning star throughout the entire year, but will not be at all conspicuous before May or June, but will continue to grow brighter throughout the year.

JUPITER will be evening star until March 10th, and morning star until Oct. 1st, and evening star the rest of the year. It will be, however, too near the Sun to be conspicuous before the end of May, and will increase in brightness until Oct. 1st, when it will be brightest, being then in opposition.

SATURN will be morning star until May 23, then evening star till Nov. 29, and morning star the rest of the year. It will be brightest about May 23d.

CHARACTERS EXPLAINED.—☿ Mercury, ♀ Venus, ♂ Mars, ♃ Jupiter, ♄ Saturn, ☽ Moon, ☉ Sun, ☍ Opposition or half a circle apart, ☐ Quadrature or quarter of a circle apart, ☌ Conjunction or together, having the same right ascension or longitude; gr. elon., greatest elongation or farthest distance from the Sun; stationary, when the planet is without apparent motion, and is about to move in a direction contrary to that it last had. The above table enables us to find the planets throughout the year.

Occultations.

The Moon will occult or eclipse the star Aldebaran (α Tauri), Jan. 7th, visible; th star disappears 1h. 17m. morning, and reappears 2h. 20m. at Washington. Again, Marc 28th, invisible at Washington, as the star is below the horizon. On Nov. 27th Ald baran will again be occulted; disappears 5h. 54m., evening, reappears 6h. 51m. at Wa ington.

The Seasons.

Spring begins March 20th, 2h. 27m. morning. | Autumn begins September 22d, 1h. 25m. evening.
Summer begins June 20th, 10h. 54m. evening. | Winter begins December 21st, 7h. 20 m. morning.

Notable Days and Periods.

Dominical Letters, E D; Epact, 6; Golden Number, 7; Solar Cycle, 1; Roman Indiction, 11; Julian Perion, 6,581.

The 93d year of American Independence begins July 4; the year 1285 of the Mohammedan Era begins April 24th, 1868.

EXPLANATION.—The Epact expresses the Moon's age on the first day of the year, and is used to determine Easter, which depends on the Moon, being always the first Sunday after the first full Moon after the vernal equinox, (March 21st.) The Golden Number is the number of years that have elapsed since a new Moon full on January 1st. It is obtained by adding one to the date, and dividing by 19, the number of years in a cycle. From eleven times the golden number subtract 10 and divide by 30, subtract one, and the remainder is the epact. The epact subtracted from 24 gives the number of days from March 21st to the next ecclesiastical full Moon, and the following Sunday, shown by the Dominical letter, is Easter Sunday.

The Sun, Moon, Earth and Bright Stars of the Year.

There are many facts connected with astronomy which are as common as household words, but which most persons are prone not to remember readily. Some figures, showing the dimensions and positions of the leading planets, may not, therefore, be amiss. We condense them from the observations of Dr. Chambers, a celebrated English Astronomer:

The Sun's distance from the Earth is 91,430,000 British statute miles. Its diameter is not less than 882,000 miles, or rather more than one hundred and eleven times the diameter of the Earth. It has a circumference of 2,646,000 miles, while the Earth's circumference is only 25,000 miles. The Sun's light is transmitted 2,700 millions of miles, and its light exceeds that of the Moon 801,072 times. The solar volume, or bulk, is 1,400,000 times greater than that of the Earth, and exceeds five hundred times the aggregate bulk of all the bodies of the planetary system. The Moon, as the Earth's satellite, is to us the most important of the secondary planets. It revolves round the Earth at a mean distance of 238,833 miles, but by the eccentricity of its orbit, it may reach from the Earth to a distance of 251,947 miles, or approach it to within 228,719 miles. Its real diameter is 2,162 English miles. The Earth is a planet, in all essential respects similar to Mars and Venus, its nearest neighbors. It revolves round the Sun at a mean distance of 91,430,000 miles; but by the eccentricity of its orbit, this distance may either extend to 92,965,000 miles, or contract to 89,894,000 miles.

The bright stars of the year 1868 are to be Mercury, Venus, Mars, Saturn, and Jupiter. The planets are called morning or evening stars when they are to the west of the Sun, and arise before it, and when to the east, and set after it. In the case of Venus it is alternately about 290 days a morning and evening star. Mercury is of the old planets the one nearest the Sun, round which it revolves at a mean distance of 39,392,000 miles; but owing to the eccentricity of its orbit, this distance may either extend to 42,665,000 miles, or fall as low as 28,119,000 miles. Its real diameter is set down at 2,962 miles. Next in order of distance from the Sun, after Mercury, is Venus, which revolves round the Sun at a mean distance of 66,131,000 miles. The eccentricity of its orbit being less, the extremes of distances are only 66,585,030 miles and 65,777,000 miles. The real diameter of Venus is supposed to be 7,510 miles, or about the same as the Earth's. Mars is the first planet exterior to the Earth, in the order of distance, from the Sun. It revolves round the Sun at a mean distance of 139,312,000 miles, which, on orbital eccentricity, may augment to 152,284,000 miles, or diminish to 126,340,000 miles. Its real diameter is somewhat less than 5,000 miles. Mars and the Earth come nearly to the same relative position every twenty-three years, but several centuries must elapse before precise coincidence occurs. Jupiter, the largest planet of our system, revolves round the Sun at a mean distance of 475,693,000 miles, but the eccentricity of its orbit is such, that the planet may recede from the Sun 488,603,000 miles, or approach it to within 452,782,000 miles. Its equatorial diameter is 68,400 miles or thereabout. Inferior in size alone, Saturn may fairly be pronounced the most interesting member of the Solar system. It revolves round the Sun at a mean distance of 872,134,000 miles, which an orbital eccentricity may increase to 921,105,000 miles, or diminish to 823,164,000 miles. Its equatorial diameter may be taken at 71,904 miles. Saturn's ring is double, and the nearest is three times as broad as the other, the one being 20,000 miles and the second 7,200 miles; the space between them is 2,839 miles.

Influence of the Moon upon the Weather.

It is important not only to seamen and navigators, but to everybody, to know the character of the Moon's influence upon the Earth. The world-renowned Navigator, Captain Lisburg, in one of his numerous works, presents the following chances of change weather:

1st. The chances of change (of weather and wind), particularly so if any one phase o the Moon happens at or nigh apogee or perigee, the greatest being at the time of perige from any one single point.

2d. The New Moon next to the perigee is likely to be accompanied with the great est changes of weather.

3d. At New Moon, coinciding with the perigee, the greatest change may be expect ed, and the chances are as great as thirty-three to one that a change of weather take place.

4th. New Moon coinciding with apogee, seven to one that a change takes place.

5th. Full Moon coinciding with perigee, ten to one a change occurs.

6th. Full Moon coinciding with apogee, eight to one a change happens.

7th. If a New Moon coinciding with perigee when the Sun is on the equator, the chanc of change of weather is very great.

8th. If at the autumnal equinox any of the lunar points coincide, there will be a great probability of a change so as to cause a typhoon on the south coast of the Chinese Sea— probably a storm or gale situated nigh the Tropic of Cancer.

9th. The changes of weather do not happen always precisely at the lunar points but, like the tides, sometimes vary a little in time from those points, for a change of wea ther often precedes one or two days the change of the Moon.

10th. Let it be remembered that the changes of the Moon are more likely to be companied by stormy weather than at the full, and also that the blowing or stormy w ther prevails more in dark nights than when much of the Moon's disc is illuminated.

By reference to the almanac these points are always known. If when the Sun's semi-diameter and horizontal parallax of the Moon are the greatest, she is then in that part of her orbit nearest the Earth, and is in what is termed perigee, and when the Sun's semi-diameter and horizontal parallax are the least, she then is at her greatest distance from the Earth, and is in apogee.

In support of the influence of the Moon on the Earth, a few extracts from the published works of the late Dr. Adam Clarke may be of service to the farmer and useful to the sailor. He says:

1st. If the New Moon happens between the hours of 10 P. M. and midnight in summer, it being in the northern hemisphere, the probability is the weather will be fine for the space of the next seven days. This calculation is from and between the hours of 10 o'clock at night and 2 o'clock the following morning; and it further adds that the nearer the New Moon is to midnight, the fairer will be the weather for the next seven days.

2d. The nearer to mid-day or noon the phases of the Moon happen, the more foul or wet the weather may be expected to be during the next seven days, and the calculation for this is in the space from 10 in the morning till 2 o'clock in the afternoon. This observation refers principally to summer, although it affects spring and autumn nearly in the same ratio.

3d. If the last quarter of the Moon takes place between 10 and 12 o'clock in the forenoon. if in the summer, there will be frequent showers of rain, and if in the winter, the weather will be cold and rainy, if the wind is westerly, and snow if in the east.

4th. The nigher to midnight the full change, first or last quarter, happens, the fairer will be the weather for the next seven days.

5th. If the Moon fulls at or nigh mid-day or noon, there will be snow or rain in winter and if in the summer months, very rainy. The space of this calculation is from noon to 2 P. M.

6th. If the New Moon is between the hours of 11 P. M. and one hour after midnight, the fairer the weather will be the next seven daxs, but if in winter, and the wind in the south, it is most likely to rain.

8th. If the Full Moon happens to take place between 10 o'clock at night and midnight expect it to be fair in summer and fair and frost in winter.

9th. To know the effect the Moon's phases have upon the weather or wind, and to predict with certainty, reference should be had to her situation as regards her orbit whether east, west, north or south of the observer, and if at or nigh the meridian.

Discovery of Two New Planets.

Professor J. C. Watson, of the Michigan University, alleges that he has discovered two new planets during the year 1867, one in August and one in September. The first is said to be in the constellation of Cetus, which lies about 6½ degrees west of Mera Ceti the wonderful variable star; it is also 38 degrees SW. of the Pleiades, and rises about P. M., being invisible through any but telescopes of superior power. It is situated according to astronomical phraseology, in the right ascension, 1 degree and 40 minutes and in declination, 3 degrees and 10 minutes south, and is at present moving west and south. The second one is said to be situated in the right ascension, 14 degrees 15 minutes, and declension 6 degrees and 10 minutes north, and is thought to be equal brilliancy to a star of the eleventh magnitude. The heavenly bodies discovered by P Watson are probably asteroids, which consist of a group of small planets, revolving between the orbits of Jupiter and Mars. The first was discovered in January, 1801; fifth in December, 1845; the forty-third, April 16, 1851; the forty-seventh, October 3, 1

RECONSTRUCTION.

There are three acts on the subject of Reconstruction: The first was passed March 2, 1867, at the Second Session of the Thirty-ninth Congress; the second, or Supplemental act, was passed March 23, 1867, at the First Session of the Fortieth Congress; and the third, or Explanatory act, was passed July 19, 1867, at the Extra Session of the Fortieth Congress. The acts are as follows:

Reconstruction Act of Thirty-ninth Congress.

AN ACT to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States.

Whereas no legal State governments or adequate protection for life or property now exist in the rebel States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Texas, and Arkansas: and whereas it is necessary that peace and good order should be enforced in said States until loyal and republican State governments can be legally established; Therefore—

Be it enacted, &c., That said rebel States shall be divided into military districts and made subject to the military authority of the United States, as hereinafter prescribed, and for that purpose Virginia shall constitute the first district; North Carolina and South Carolina the second district: Georgia, Alabama, and Florida the third district; Mississippi, and Arkansas the fourth district; and Louisiana and Texas the fifth district.

SEC. 2. That it shall be the duty of the President to assign to the command of each of said districts an officer of the army, not below the rank of brigadier general, and to detail a sufficient military force to enable such officer to perform his duties and enforce his authority within the district to which he is assigned.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of each officer assigned as aforesaid to protect all persons in their rights of person and property, to suppress insurrection, disorder, and violence, and to punish, or cause to be punished, all disturbers of the public peace and criminals, and to this end he may allow local civil tribunals to take jurisdiction of and to try offenders, or, when in his judgment it may be necessary for the trial of offenders, he shall have power to organize military commissions or tribunals for that purpose; and all interference under color of State authority with the exercise of military authority under this act shall be null and void.

SEC. 4. That all persons put under military arrest by virtue of this act shall be tried without unnecessary delay, and no cruel or unusual punishment shall be inflicted; and no sentence of any military commission or tribunal hereby authorized, affecting the life or liberty of any person, shall be executed until it is approved by the officer in command of the district; and the laws and regulations for the government of the army shall not be affected by this act, except in so far as they conflict with its provisions: Provided, That no sentence of death under the provisions of this act shall be carried into effect without the approval of the President.

SEC. 5. That when the people of any one of said rebel States shall have formed a constitution of government in conformity with the Constitution of the United States in all respects, framed by a convention of delegates elected by the male citizens of said State twenty-one years old and upward, of whatever race, color, or previous condition, who have been resident in said State for one year previous to the day of such election, except such as may be disfranchised for participation in the rebellion or for felony at common law, and when such constitution shall provide that the elective franchise shall be enjoyed by all such persons as have the qualifications herein stated for electors of delegates, and when such constitution shall be ratified by a majority of the persons voting on the question of ratification who are qualified as electors for delegates, and when such constitution shall have been submitted to Congress for examination and approval, and Congress shall have approved the same, and when said State, by a vote of its legislature elected under said constitution shall have adopted the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, proposed by the thirty-ninth Congress, and known as article fourteen, and when said article shall have become a part of the Constitution of the United States, said State shall be declared entitled to representation in Congress, and senators and representatives shall be admitted therefrom on their taking the oaths prescribed by law, and then and thereafter the preceding sections of this act shall be inoperative in said State: Provided, That no person excluded from the privilege of holding office by said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States shall be eligible to election as a member of the convention to frame a constitution for any of said rebel States, nor shall any such person vote for members of such convention.

SEC. 6. That until the people of said rebel States shall be by law admitted to representation in the Congress of the United States, y civil governments which may exist herein shall be deemed provisional only, and in all respects subject to the paramount authority of the United States at any time to abolish, modify, control, or supersede the same; and in all elections to any office under such provisional governments all persons shall be entitled to vote, and none others, who are entitled to vote under the provisions of the fifth section of this act: and no person shall be eligible to any office under any such provisional governments who would be disqualified from holding office under the provisions of the third article of said constitutional amendment.

Passed March 2, 1867.

Proposed 14th Constitutional Amendment.

The following is the proposed constitutional amendment referred to in section five:

ARTICLE XIV.

SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

SEC. 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or giving aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume to pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

Passed June 13, 1866.

The Mohammedan Calendar.

The Mohammedan year is Lunar. The months consist alternately of 29 and 30 days; to the last month an intercalary day is added eleven times in a period of 30 years. These are called abounding-years, corresponding to our leap-years, and consist of 355 days; the common year being 354. These abounding-years are the 2d, 5th, 7th, 10th, 13th, 15th, 18th, 21st, 24th, 26th and the 29th, making 32 of our years nearly equal to 33 Mohammedan years.

New and Valuable Tide Table of 110 Places.

To find the time of high-water at any of the places named in the following table, add the time indicated in the first column of figures to the time of "Moon South," found in the calendar pages. EXAMPLE: Required the time of high-water at New Haven for May 4th and 7th. For the 3d, Moon South, at 9h. 55m. in the afternoon, which added to 11h. 16m. gives 21h. or 9h. 11m. of the morning of the 4th for time of high-water. On the 7th, Moon South at 0h. 24m. morning, which added as before, gives 11h. 40m. in the morning for high-water. There are two tides during the passage of the Moon from the meridian, around to the meridian again, and they are about 12h. 26m. apart.

Additional Explanatory Act.

AN ACT supplementary to an act entitled "An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States," passed on the second day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and the act supplementary thereto, passed on the twenty-third day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Be it enacted, &c., That it is hereby declared to have been the true intent and meaning of the act of second day of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, entitled, "An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States," and of the act supplementary thereto, passed on the twenty-third day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, that the governments then existing in the rebel States of Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Texas, and Arkansas, were provisional only, and that the legal State governments, and thereafter said governments, if continued, were to be continued subject in all respects to the military commanders of the respective districts, and to the paramount authority of Congress.

SEC. 2. That the commander of any district named in said act shall have power, subject to the disapproval of the General of the Army of the United States, and to have effect till disapproved, whenever in the opinion of such commander the proper administration of said act shall require it, to suspend or remove from office, or from the performance of official duties and the exercise of official powers, any officer or person holding or exercising or professing to hold or exercise, any civil or military office or duty in such district under any power, election, appointment, or authority derived from, or granted by, or claimed under, any so-called State or the government thereof, or any municipal or other division thereof; and upon such suspension or removal such commander, subject to the disapproval of the General as aforesaid, shall have power to provide from time to time for the performance of the said duties of such officer or person so suspended or removed, by the detail of some competent officer or soldier of the army, or by the appointment of some other person, to perform the same, and to fill vacancies occasioned by death, resignation, or otherwise.

SEC. 3. That the General of the Army of the United States shall be invested with all the powers of suspension, removal, appointment, and detail granted in the preceding section to district commanders.

SEC. 4. That the acts of the officers of the army already done in removing in said districts persons exercising the functions of civil officers, and appointing others in their stead, are hereby confirmed: Provided, That any person heretofore or hereafter appointed by any district commander to exercise the functions of any civil office may be removed either by the military officer in command of the district, or by the General of the Army. And it shall be the duty of such commander to remove from office, as aforesaid, all persons who are disloyal to the government of the United States, or who use their official influence in any manner to hinder, delay, prevent, or obstruct the due and proper administration of this act and the acts to which it is supplementary.

SEC. 5. That the boards of registration provided for in the act entitled "An act supplementary to an act entitled 'An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States,' passed March two, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and to facilitate restoration," passed March twenty-three, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, shall have power, and it shall be their duty before allowing the registration of any person, to ascertain, upon such facts or information as they can obtain, whether such person is entitled to be registered under said act, and the oath required by said act shall not be conclusive on such question, and no person shall be registered unless such board shall decide that he is entitled thereto; and such board shall also have power to examine, under oath, (to be administered by any member of such board) any one touching the qualification of any person claiming registration; but in every case of refusal by the board to register an applicant, and in every case of striking his name from the list as hereinafter provided, the board shall make a note or memorandum, which shall be returned with the registration list to the commanding general of the district, setting forth the grounds of such refusal or such striking from the list: Provided, That no person shall be disqualified as member of any board of registration by reason of race or color.

SEC. 6. That the true intent and meaning of the oath prescribed in said supplementary act is, (among other things,) that no person who has been a member of the legislature of any State, or who has held any executive or judicial office in any State, whether he has taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States or not, and whether he was holding such office at the commencement of the rebellion, or had held it before, and who has afterwards engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof, is entitled to be registered or to vote; and the words "executive or judicial office in any State" in said oath mentioned shall be construed to include all civil offices created by law for the administration of any general law of a State, or for the administration of justice.

SEC. 7. That the time for completing the original registration provided for in said act may, in the discretion of the commander of any district, be extended to the first day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven; and the boards of registration shall have power, and it shall be their duty, commencing fourteen days prior to any election under said act, and upon reasonable public notice of the time and place thereof, to revise, for a period of five days, the registration lists, and upon being satisfied that any person not entitled thereto has been registered, to strike the name of such person from the list, and such person shall not be allowed to vote. And such board shall also, during the same period, add to such registry the names of all persons who at that time possess the qualifications required by said act who have not been already registered; and no person shall, at any time, be entitled to be registered or to vote by reason of any executive pardon or amnesty for any act or thing which, without such pardon or amnesty, would disqualify him from registration or voting.

SEC. 8. That section four of said last-named act shall be construed to authorize the commanding general named therein, whenever he shall deem it needful, to remove any member of a board of registration and to appoint another in his stead, and to fill any vacancy in such board.

SEC. 9. That all members of said boards of registration, and all persons hereafter elected or appointed to office in said military districts, under any so-called State or municipal authority, or by detail or appointment of the district commanders, shall be required to take and to subscribe the oath of office prescribed by law for officers of the United States.

SEC. 10. That no district commander or member of the board of registration, or any of the officers or appointees acting under them, shall be bound in his action by any opinion of any civil officer of the United States.

SEC. 11. That all the provisions of this act and of the acts to which this is supplementary shall be construed liberally, to the end that all the intents thereof may be fully and perfectly carried out.

Passed July 19, 1867.

Steps Towards Restoration—Presiden Lincoln's Plan.

Before referring to the action of the Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Congresses, we propose to give a brief resume of what Presidents Lincoln and Johnson attempted, and what the Southern States themselves did to restore their relations to the Union.

President Lincoln, and with him a majority of his party, almost up to the time of the surrender of the Confederate armies, believed that the war was for the sole purpose of "restoring the Union." This belief was based upon the declaration of Congress, which, as early as July 23, 1861, passed a resolution, that the war was only "to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution, * * and to preserve the Union, with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpared." Mr. Lincoln's own often-expressed fear was, that, after a conquered peace, the Southern States might refuse the proffer of restoration. President Johnson, in his speech of February 22, 1866, says, that when he came to Washington to be inaugurated as Vice President, in his first interview with Mr. Lincoln, in a conversation relative to the Southern States, Mr. Lincoln said: "My great and sole desire has been to preserve these States intact under the Constitution, as they were before; and there should be an amendment to the Constitution which would compel the States to send their Senators and Representatives to the Congress of the United States." Mr. Lincoln's early acts, indorsed by Congress and approved by the Republican party, looked to this sort of restoration. His first efforts were in Louisiana. New Orleans was captured in April, 1862, and shortly after, as General Butler testified before the Committee on the Conduct of the War, it was intimated to him from Washington that the election of two members of Congress from Louisiana would be desirable; and he further testified that he sent General Weitzel to make an expedition into the Lafourche district for the express purpose of including territory enough within the Federal lines to warrant the election of a second Congressman. Eight months (Nov. 14, 1862,) after the occupation of New Orleans, by command of General Butler, Military Governor, Brigadier General G. F. Shepley issued an order in which he said: "Whereas the State of Louisiana is now, and has been, without any Representatives in the Thirty-seventh Congress of the United States of America; and whereas, a very large majority of the citizens of the First and Second Congressional Districts in this State, by taking the oath of allegiance, have given evidence of their loyalty and obedience to the Constitution and laws of the United States," et cet era, the election of two members of Con gress was ordered. Accordingly, in December, Messrs. Hahn and Flanders were elected from those districts, and went to Washington, but were refused seats. Still further, under the direction of the President, a reorganization of the State government was ordered; the State constitution was revised by a convention, submitted to the people, and ratified; a legislature was chosen; in March, 1864, Michael Hahn was elected Governor by the people; subsequently, the legislature chose United States Senators, one of whom was Hahn, then Governor; and in the following popular election J. Madison Wells was chosen Governor of the State. Although the United States Senators and Representatives elect were refused admission, the State Government, as re-organized under the Lincoln–Banks plan, was never interfered with by Congress till the final Reconstruction acts were passed.

Incidentally, it is a matter of history that the unhappy Olustee expedition, in 1863, was undertaken mainly for the purpose of "opening up" a Congressional District in Florida; indeed, President Lincoln may be said to have been represented on the ground in the person of his Private Secretary, Mr. John Hay, who accompanied this unfortunate expedition.

President Lincoln's efforts at restoration in Tennessee date from his appointment of Andrew Johnson as Military Governor of that State. Governor Johnson began the work of reorganization by calling a convention, which forever abolished slavery in the State, declared the ordinance of secession null and void, and repudiated the rebel debt. Under the reorganization effected by Andrew Johnson, William G. Brownlow, March 4, 1865, was elected Governor by a popular vote. Congress never interfered with this reorganization or reconstruction of the State; and Tennessee, Louisiana and Florida were the only States in which Mr. Lincoln was able to accomplish anything in the way of "restoration."

The Policy of President Johnson.

By the death of Mr. Lincoln, Andrew Johnson succeeded to the Presidency, April 15, 1865. No extra session of Congress was called, and until the opening of the Thirty-ninth Congress, in December, Mr. Johnson faithfully carried out the policy of his predecessor, by holding out inducements to the Southern States to reorganize their governments, and to restore as rapidly as possible their rightful relations to the Union. He issued an order, April 29, 1865, removing unnecessary commercial restrictions in certain parts of the States of Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and in Louisiana, east of the Mississippi River; an order May 9, 1865, re-establishing the authority of the United States and the execution of the laws in Virginia, and recognizing Governor Pierpoint's administration; declaring Southern ports, except those in Texas, open, May 22, 1865; a Proclamation of Amnesty, May 29, 1865, based on President Lincoln's proclamations of December 8, 1863, and March 26, 1864. On the same day, in conformity with the action of his predecessor, he appointed William W. Holden Provisional Governor of North Carolina; and, subsequently, in June and July, he appointed other Provisional Governors, as follows: William L. Sharkey, for Mississippi; James Johnson, for Georgia; Andrew J. Hamilton, for Texas; Lewis F. Parsons, for Alabama; Benjamin F. Perry, for South Carolina; and William Marvin, for Florida. Previous to the assembling of Congress, in December, other orders and proclamations of the President, relating to the Southern States, were the following: A Proclamation June 13, 1865, respecting commercial intercourse, and the suppression of the rebellion in Tennessee; June 23, rescinding the blockade; August 29, further removal of commercial restrictions; October 12, withdrawal of martial law from Kentucky; and December 1, annulling the suspension of the habeas corpus.

Action of the Southern States.

President Johnson lost no opportunity to convey to the South the "conditions" upon which the early restoration of the States might reasonably be expected. The States themselves must abolish slavery forever within their own borders; they must declare the secession ordinances null and void; they must repudiate the rebel debt; and their senators and representatives elect must be able to take the test oath. The Provisional Governors were authorized, and, in some instances, ordered, to proceed with the reorganization of the State governments, by calling conventions to revise the State constitutions; and the inducement was held out that a reorganization on the foregoing plan would result in a speedy resumption of their electoral privileges by the people, for the choice of State and local officers, and for the election of representatives to Congress from all the States. The main qualification for an elector for delegates to the convention was the exhibition of his duly-certified signature to the Amnesty Oath contained in the President's proclamation of May 29, 1865.

Delegates to the conventions were accordingly elected in the several States. In North Carolina the convention met in October, 1865, declared the secession ordinance null and void, and passed ordinances prohibiting slavery forever in the State, repudiating the rebel debt, and dividing the State into seven Congressional Districts. November 9, these ordinances were submitted to the people and approved; and on the ıe day State officers and members of ıgress were elected. December 1, the legislature ratified the anti-slavery amendment; and December 15, Jonathan Worth, elected in November, was qualified as Governor of the State. In Mississippi the convention met August 14, and passed the required ordinances respecting slavery in the State and the secession ordinance. On the first Monday in October, State officers and members of Congress were elected. The legislature met October 16, and the next day Benjamin G. Humphreys was inaugurated Governor. November 27, the legislature declined to ratify the anti-slavery amendment. The Georgia convention submitted the anti-slavery, anti-secession and rebel debt repudiation ordinances to the people; November 15, State officers and members of Congress were elected; and December 5, the legislature ratified the anti-slavery amendment. The Alabama convention passed the required ordinances. In November State officers, (R. M. Patton, Governor,) and members of Congress were elected; December 2, the legislature ratified the anti-slavery amendment, and December 5, Provisional Governor Parsons received a telegram from Secretary Seward, conveying the congratulations of the President, that, by its vote ratifying the anti-slavery amendment, the State of Alabama "being the twenty-seventh, fills up the complement of two-thirds, and gives the amendment finishing effect as a part of the organic law of the land." South Carolina, by order of Provisional Governor Perry, called a convention, which ordered a State election October 18, when James L. Orr, was elected Governor. November 13, the legislature ratified the anti-slavery amendment, and November 22, members of Congress were elected. Florida annulled the secession ordinance, abolished slavery, and repudiated the rebel debt. November 29, State officers and a representative to Congress were elected; and December 28, the legislature ratified the anti-slavery amendment. In Virginia the administration of Governor Francis H. Pierpoint, having been recognizedby the President's order of May 9, 1865, the State government continued without interruption; and October 12, 1865, representatives in Congress were elected. From the date of Brownlow's election, March 4, 1865, as Governor of Tennessee, the government in that State has been unmolested by Congress. Texas annulled the secession ordinance, abolished slavery, and repudiated the rebel debt. The provisional government of Hamilton was followed by an elected State government, headed by Governor Throckmorton. In October, 1865, when Isaac Murphy was elected Governor of Arkansas, President Johnson telegraphed to him that there would be no interference with the "present organization of State government," and added, "I have learned * * * that all is working well, and you will proceed and resume the former relations with the Federal Government, and all the aid in the power of the government will be given in restoring the State to its former relations."

The Policy of Congress—Reconstruction vs. Restoration.

The foregoing sums up the principal points in the action and efforts of President Lincoln, President Johnson, and the Southern States, to reorganize and restore those States to their normal condition in respect of the other States. During the Summer and Autumn of 1865, Mr. Johnson made brief addresses to different delegations, and held interviews with men of note from all parts of the country, in which he clearly enunciated the plan then in progress, its complete success so far, and his implicit belief that it would result in an easy, speedy, and complete restoration of the Union. These views, widely disseminated, led to a general confidence throughout the country that the settlement of the questions at issue was near at hand; and the effect upon the business and industrial interests of the country was everywhere manifest. As the President telegraphed to Governor Murphy, of Arkansas, "all was working well."

The Thirty-ninth Congress met, and, December 4, the President sent in his first annual message, in which he recited the steps already taken in the Southern States, the then condition and situation, and made the first official announcement of his policy, by declaring what he believed to be luty of Congress towards those States. the Republican majority had yet to ounce its plan of "reconstruction;" and meanwhile, the representatives elect from the Southern States—rejected at roll call when the House organized—were waiting, with their credentials, for admission at the doors. Caucus and Congress declared that, as each House had the constitutional right to decide with regard to the qualifications of its own members, the Southern members elect, for the present at least, should be excluded. The first step was the appointment, December 13, 1865, of what soon became the "Joint Committee on Reconstruction," but which, under the concurrent resolution authorizing the appointment, was simply and only a committee to "inquire into the condition" of the Southern States, "and to report whether they, or any of them, are entitled to be represented in either House of Congress." December 18, the President, in response to a resolution of the Senate, sent in a message "on the late insurrectionary States," in which he stated that, "as the result of the measures instituted by the Executive, with the view of inducing a resumption of the functions of the States comprehended in the inquiry of the Senate, the people in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Tennessee, have reorganized their respective State governments, and are yielding obedience to the laws and government of the United States with more willingness and greater promptitude than, under the circumstances could reasonably have been anticipated;" and he further reported what these States had done. This message was accompanied by the report of General Grant, in which he said, that, after a tour of inspection through the South, he was "satisfied that the mass of thinking men of the South accept the present situation of affairs in good faith," and that his observations led him "to the conclusion that the citizens of the Southern States are anxious to return to self-government within the Union as soon as possible." Senator Sumner characterized this report as a "whitewashing" one.

Congress was now almost wholly devoted to what was called "Reconstruction," and Congress confided the sole management and conduct of the matter to the Joint Committee, to whom all papers, resolutions, or anything relating to the readmission or restoration of the Southern States, or referring in any sense to Southern affairs, were, by a vote of both Houses, to be referred without debate. The action, or rather, inaction, of this Committee, is too widely known to need extended comment. But there was a show of work—now and then a report of "progress," or something equally vague and intangible; and whenever the country, and even Congress, became impatient and clamored for a "report," the invariable sop to Cerberus was another impracticable "Constitutional amendment," sure to be slaughtered in the Senate if it ever passed the House. More than six months elapsed before the Committee favored Congress and the country with its first formal report; but this interval (with months more) is presumed to have been employed in taking "testimony" with regard to the "loyalty" of the Southern States—which testimony was subsequently embodied in an octavo volume of 800 pages. The impatience of the country was manifest almost as soon as the Committee began to hold its secret sessions. February 20, 1866, Mr. Stevens reported from the Committee to the House of Representatives a resolution "that, in order to close agitation upon a question which seems likely to disturb the action of the Government, as well as to quiet the uncertainty which is agitating the minds of the people of the eleven States, * * no Senator or Representative shall be admitted into either branch of Congress from any of said States until Congress shall have declared such State entitled to such representation." The House passed the resolution; the next day, on motion of Mr. Stevens, the House tabled a motion (by Mr. Stevens) to reconsider the vote on the resolution; and, March 2, the Senate passed it! The passage, veto, and repassage of the Civil Rights bill followed. As the weeks wore on, the question of Reconstruction—in the form of various resolutions proposed and tabled, or passed to-day and reconsidered to-morrow, or amendments amended in the Senate and re-amended in the House—was ever flying, like a shuttlecock, between the two ends of the Capitol.

At last, June 18, 1866, Mr. Fessenden, in the Senate, and Mr. Stevens, in the House, submitted the long-looked-for report of the Joint Committee on Reconstruction. This very voluminous paper recited at length the points of opposition, in the Congressional plan, to the policy of the President; but it proposed no definite means, immediate or prospective, for the readmission to representation of the Southern States; and considering that the committee was one of "inquiry," it afforded an infinitesimally small amount of information. It admitted that "the people of most of the States lately in rebellion had, under the advice of the President, organized local governments, and some of them had acceded to the terms proposed by him;" but it declared that the Southern States have "forfeited all civil and political rights and privileges under the Constitution," and that "they can only be restored thereto by the permission and authority of that constitutional power against which they rebelled and by which they were subdued;" and the conclusion of the Committee, therefore, was "that the so-called Confederate States are not at present entitled to representation in the Congress of the United States." Mr. Reverdy Johnson, in the Senate, and Mr. Rogers, in the House, in a minority report, June 22, presented an elaborate and able argument in favor of the speedy readmission of the Southern States, and said that the minority had "not thought it necessary to examine into the legality of the measures adopted, either by the late or present President, for the restoration of the Southern States." It was "sufficient for their purpose to say that, if those of President Johnson were not justified by the Constitution, the same may at least be said of those of his predecessor. * * The motives of neither President, however, whether the measures were legal or not, are liable to censure. The sole object of each was to effect a complete and early union of all the States; to make the general government, as it did at first, embrace all, and to extend its authority and secure its privileges and blessings to all alike."

The Proposed Fourteenth Constitutional Amendment.

The attention of the Joint Committee on Reconstruction was early directed to the supposed necessity of an amendment to the Constitution with regard to representation in Congress. Mr. Stevens, Jan. 22, 1866, reported from the Reconstruction Committee an article, proposing to exclude from the basis of representation all who were denied the elective franchise "on account of race or color." Sundry substitutes or amendments to the proposed amendment were offered, and, January 30, it was recommitted to the Committee without instruction. The next day, Mr. Stevens offered substantially the same amendment, omitting only the apportionment of "dir taxes," as well as "representatives" upon the proposed basis. Mr. Schenck, of Ohio, offered a substitute, which was disagreed to. February 13, Mr. Bingham reported from the Reconstruction Committee, in the House, another Constitutional amendment, proposing to give Congress the power to make certain laws for the government of all the States; and Mr. Fessenden, the same day, reported this wholesale reconstruction measure in the Senate. The House at once recommitted it; fifteen days afterwards, Mr. Bingham reported the same amendment again; the House then, instead of returning it to the Committee, "postponed its consideration" to April 10, and never called it up; in the Senate it was instantly "laid over," and not again considered! March 9, the Senate rejected the Constitutional amendment reported by Mr. Stevens, January 31, in the House. April 30, Mr. Stevens, from the same Committee, reported a paradoxical bill "to provide for restoring the States lately in insurrection to their full political rights," by fettering those States with the political restrictions embodied in the proposed 14th Constitutional amendment, the first draft of which was presented in this bill. At the same time, Mr. Stevens reported from the Reconstruction Committee another joint resolution proposing a Constitutional amendment, mainly the same as the now proposed 14th in respect of the clause relating to the apportionment of representatives, but containing a section excluding "until the 4th day of July, 1870, all persons who voluntarily adhered to the late insurrection, giving it aid and comfort, from the right to vote for representatives in Congress, and for electors for President and Vice President of the United States." May 10, this resolution, with Mr. Stevens' proposed Constitutional amendment containing the "until 1870" disfranchising section, passed the House—yeas 128, nays, 37,—and was sent to the Senate, where it was amended according to the present text, and was passed by a vote of 33 to 11—5 Senators absent. The House accepted and passed the amendment June 13, as it came from the Senate, by a vote 138 to 36. The professed importance of the proposed amendment makes the following seem at least singular: Five days after the passage of the amendment, a concurrent resolution of the two Houses was referred to Secretary Seward, "That the President of the United States be requested to transmit forthwith to the executives of the several States, copies of the article of amendment proposed by Congress to the State legislatures to amend the Constitution of the United States, passed June 13, 1866," et cetera; two days later, June 20, the Secretary of State communicated this request to the President, with the information that the amendment was brought to the State Department June 16, and on that day transmitted to the Governors of the several States. Thus, Congress, on the 18th, was oblivious of the fact that "somebody" had attended to the transmission of the amendment on the 16th, and until the 20th, the President was presumed to be (officially) ignorant that the proposed amendment was in existence. That he was aware of the fact, however, he took pains to inform Congress in a special message, in which he said: "Even in ordinary times any questions of amending the Constitution must be justly regarded as of paramount importance. This importance is at the present time enhanced by the fact that the joint resolution was not submitted by the two Houses for the approval of the President, and that of the thirty-six States which constitute the Union eleven are excluded from representation in either House of Congress, although, with the single exception of Texas, they have been entirely restored to all their functions as States, in conformity with the organic law of the land, and have appeared at the national capitol by Senators and Representatives, who have applied for and have been refused admission to the vacant seats." He further observed "that the steps taken by the Secretary of State are to be considered as purely ministerial, and in no sense whatever committing the executive to an approval or a recommendation of the amendment to the State legislatures or to the people."

So the proposed amendment went to the States. Tennessee, July 12, 1866, was the first to ratify it; and, July 23, Congress passed a joint resolution, approved by the President July 24, "restoring Tennessee to her relations to the Union." The two Senators and five Representatives elect from that State at once qualified and took their seats—the three remaining Representatives qualifying in December following. During October, November, and December, 1866 and in January and February, 1867, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia rejected; Iowa, California and Nebraska have acted upon it; and in 1866 and 1867, twenty remaining States ratified it. After the admission of Tennessee, for a long while the proposed amendment seemed to excite little attention. Indeed, in February, 1867, an effort was made to prepare a substitute, and such an amendment, said to be satisfactory to the President, and including a section which would remove from the basis of representation all persons denied the elective franchise "on account of race or color," was submitted, as a test, to the legislature of North Carolina, but was rejected. The proposed 14th amendment, however, derives a new interest and importance from its incorporation in, and connection with, the Reconstruction acts.

Further Efforts of the President.

President Johnson, April 2, 1866, issued a Proclamation that the rebellion had ended. In answer to the inquiry of James H. Bell, Secretary of State of Texas, he sent a telegram, July 28, 1866, directing that the legislature could assemble August 6, "without hinderance"; that the Governor elect (Throckmorton) could be inaugurated

"without hinderance"; and, that thereafter "the Provisional Governor would be relieved, and the government transferred to the elected authorities of Texas." August 20, 1866, he issued a Proclamation declaring the insurrection at an end, and civil authority existing throughout the United States. September 7, 1867, he issued an Amnesty Proclamation, modifying the Proclamation of May 29, 1865, wherein "fourteen extensive classes of persons were altogether excepted and excluded from the benefits thereof," so that "the full and beneficent pardon conceded" in that Proclamation "should be opened and further extended to a large number of the persons who, by its aforesaid exceptions, have been hitherto excluded from Executive clemency."

Reconstruction by Congress.

The Second Session of the Thirty-ninth Congress began December 3, 1866, and, the same day, the President sent in his second annual message which was mainly devoted to restoration; to an exposition and defence of his own position; and to a recital of what had been done already towards "the gradual restoration of the States, in which the insurrection occurred, to their relations with the Federal Government." Since "the coercion of arms" had been superseded by civil authority, he said, in all of those States, "the people, by their voluntary action, are maintaining their governments in full activity and complete operation." What remained to be done was "the admission to Congress of loyal Senators and Representatives," and this, he thought, was "imperatively demanded by every consideration of national interest, sound policy, and equal justice."

The vague and unsatisfactory majority report (June 18, 1866), of the Joint Committee on Reconstruction, had only suggested something, and had decided upon nothing; so when Congress reassembled in December, the dominant party was still "at sea" in search of a definite plan for reconstruction. A step in obstruction, however, was at once taken in the House, by passing a bill, December 3, repealing the 13th section of the act of July 17, 1862, authorizing the President by proclamation "to extend to persons who may have participated in the existing rebellion * * pardon and amnesty." [The Senate passed this bill, January 7, 1867, and it became a law by the approval of the President to return it within ten days after its presentation to him.] On the second day of the Session, the House instructed the Committee on Territories to inquire into the expediency of providing Territorial Governments for "the several districts of country" formerly occupied by "the once existing States"—the resolution naming all the Southern States except Tennessee. December 6, Senator Sumner introduced six resolutions "declaring the true principles of reconstruction," to wit, the jurisdiction of Congress over the whole subject," and "illegality of the existing governments in the rebel States," and their exclusion "from representation in Congress and from voting on Constitutional Amendments." December 13, Mr. Stevens, in the House, introduced a bill for the civil government of North Carolina. In the Senate, Mr. Trumbull presented memorials for the abrogation of the State governments of Virginia and Louisiana, and the substitution of territorial governments, declaring that "Congress has complete jurisdiction over the whole subject." The District of Columbia was reconstructed by a bill, December 13-14, giving the negroes resident therein the right of suffrage; and Congress adjourned for the holidays, reassembling January 3, 1867. The President, January 7, vetoed the District negro-suffrage bill, and it was at once repassed over the veto.

Several days in January were devoted to debate upon a bill presented by Mr. Stevens, in the House, as a substitute for the Reconstruction Committee Bill; and for the Stevens substitute, Mr. James M. Ashley, of Ohio, offered another substitute, in the form of an amendment, declaring the existing governments in the Southern States invalid, and all their action null and void, except so far as they shall be ratified by State governments hereafter legally organized; all male citizens, without regard to race or former condition of servitude are to take part in the formation of the new State governments; meanwhile, a "Provisional Committee of Safety" of five "loyal" citizens would take charge of the State and of the election of delegates to a Convention to appoint a Provisional Governor and other officers, and to frame a State Constitution; if this Constitution—which must embody certain "points" stated in the Ashley amendment—was satisfactory to Congress, and if certain other conditions are complied with, the reconstructed State might be declared entitled to all the rights, privileges, et cetera, of "a State in the American Union." This elaborate scheme, together with the Stevens plan, protracted the debate to January 26, when Mr. Ashley withdrew his substitute; and on the 28th the whole matter was referred back to the Reconstruction Committee. February 9, Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, offered a proposition to send "a commission of three persons," to be appointed, one by the Senate, one by the House, and one by the War Department, "to re-establish civil government" in Louisiana.

Meanwhile, February 6, Mr. Stevens, from the Committee on Reconstruction, reported a bill "to provide for the more efficient government of the insurrectionary States." This bill, as originally introduced, did not differ greatly from the text of the bill finally passed by Congress. It declared that the governments in the Southern States were set up without the authority of Congress, and without the sanction of the people," and that these "so-pretended governments countenance and encourage lawlessness and crime!" These sentences were omitted, and other expressions were modified, in the final bill. On the 13th, the House considered Mr. Stevens' bill, and Mr. Blaine, of Maine, moved its reference to the Judiciary Committee, with instructions to report it back, with an amendment that any State ratifying the proposed 14th Constitutional amendment, conforming its constitution and laws thereto, the people of the State ratifying, and Congress approving the same, such State should be entitled to representation in Congress, and the bill should become inoperative in that State. Mr. Blaine's amendment was lost, 69 ayes to 95 nays, and the bill, as reported by Mr. Stevens, was passed by a vote of 109 to 55. It came up in the Senate, February 15, and Reverdy Johnson offered the Blaine (House) amendment. Senator Wilson offered a bill declaring that "the Constitutional amendment, having been ratified by the requisite number of States, had now become a part of the Constitution of the United States;" but the bill, in substance, called for a further ratification by "the States lately in insurrection;" and proposed when any State should so ratify, secure impartial suffrage, and comply with other conditions, such State shall "be declared entitled to representation in Congress." The Johnson-Blaine amendment and Wilson's bill were disagreed to; and, February 16, Senator Sherman presented a substitute for the Stevens bill as it came from the House, which was adopted by a vote of 29 to 10—13 Senators not voting. The House, February 19, refused to concur in this bill, and asked for a committee of conference; the Senate refused; the House then added an amendment, and passed the bill, 98 to 70; and the Senate, February 20, accepting the House amendment by a vote of 35 to 7, passed the bill in its present form.

The bill was returned to the House, March 2, by the President with his veto. The declaration that there was "no adequate protection for life and property" in the Southern States, was not supported by any evidence which had come to the President's knowledge; all his information convinced him that "the masses of the Southern people * * are completely united in the effort to reorganize their society on the basis of peace, and to restore their mutual prosperity as rapidly and as completely as their circumstances will permit;" the bill seems "to show on its face that the establishment of peace and good order is not real object;" he then recites the politi. portions of the bill, and says, "the excu given for the bill in the preamble is a mitted by the bill itself not to be real; he submits to Congress "whether this measure is not in its whole character, scope, and object, without precedent and without authority, and in palpable conflict with the plainest provisions of the Constitution;" "the power given to the commanding officer over all the people of each district is that of an absolute monarch; his mere will is to take the place of all law;" and "the purpose and object of the bill, the general intent which prevades it from beginning to end, is to change the entire structure and character of the State governments, and to compel them, by force, to the adoption of organic laws and regulations which they are unwilling to accept if left to themselves." These were among the main objections urged by the President to the bill—its despotism, its political purpose, and its unconstitutionality. Notwithstanding the objections, the House, by a vote of 135 to 48, and the Senate, by a vote of 38 to 10, immediately passed the bill over the veto, and it became a law March 2, 1867.

The bill having thus become a law, the President immediately proceeded to put it into execution by the appointment of the following Military Commanders of the five districts:

First District—Virginia: General J. M. Schofield; headquarters, Richmond, Va.

Second District—North Carolina and South Carolina: General D. E. Sickles; headquarters, Columbia, S. C.

Third District—Georgia, Florida, and Alabama: Headquarters, Montgomery, Ala.; General G. H. Thomas—at whose request General John Pope was subsequently assigned to this command, General Thomas retaining command of the Department of the Cumberland.

Fourth District—Mississippi and Arkansas: General E. O. C. Ord; headquarters, Vicksburg, Miss.

Fifth District—Louisiana and Texas: General P. H. Sheridan; headquarters, New Orleans.

These Generals at once proceeded to their respective departments, and assumed their commands.

Supplemental Reconstruction.

The Thirty-ninth Congress expired, and the Fortieth Congress immediately entered upon its First Session, March 4, 1867. The Reconstruction Committee's bill, supplementary to the act of March 2, and making provisions for carrying out the details of that act, was passed March 18. In this bill (we give the complete text elsewhere) there is nothing about the insecurity of life and property in the Southern States, and the consequent necessity for military protection and intervention, but it simply provides for the political reconstruction foreshadowed in the original act. The President, March 23, returned this bill with his veto, in which he reiterated the objections to the original bill, as applicable to this, and presented new objections, prominent among others—that the people themselves are to have no voice in conducting the registration or election; that the Conventions would not represent the citizens of the States; and that, if, as the bill pre-supposes, negro suffrage is essential to a republican form of government, "the work of reconstruction may as well begin in Ohio as in Virginia, in Pennsylvania as in North Carolina." Notwithstanding the veto, the Senate repassed the

by a vote of 40 to 7, and the House by a te of 114 to 25, and it became a law, March 23, 1867. The President approved, March 30, a joint resolution providing for the expenses of "carrying into effect" the Reconstruction act, on the ground that the seventh section of the supplementary act provided that the expenses incurred under that act "should be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated;" whereas the joint resolution limits the appropriation to $500,000; and as the President considered this limitation "as a very necessary check against unlimited expenditures and liabilities," he "felt bound to approve the resolution, without modifying in any manner his objections, heretofore stated, against the original and supplementary acts."

Congress adjourned March 31, and reassembled July 4. In April, the States of Georgia and Mississippi presented petitions to the Supreme Court of the United States to issue injunctions prohibiting the President and district commanders from taking any measures to carry out the provisions of the Reconstruction acts. Chief Justice Chase, April 15, delivered the opinion of the Court on the Mississippi application for an injunction to restrain the President and General Ord from executing certain acts in Mississippi and Arkansas, showing "the impropriety of such interference," which, said the Court, "will clearly be seen upon consideration of its probable consequences"—in substance as follows: If the President should refuse obedience, the Court is without power to enforce its process; and if the President complied, the House might impeach him for refusing to execute the + of Congress; a bill praying an injunction against the execution of an act of Congress by the incumbent of the Presidential office cannot be received, whether it describes him as President, or simply as a citizen of a State. Motion for leave to file the bill was therefore denied. In the case of the State of Georgia against certain officers, the Attorney-General made no objection to the policy of the bill, and leave was granted to file that bill. The State of Georgia is complainant against Edwin M. Stanton, Ulysses S. Grant, and John Pope; and, April 16, a subpœna was issued in the case, these men to appear before the Supreme Court, December 2, 1867, to answer to the bill of complaint of the State of Georgia. Notwithstanding the full details of the Supplemental act, the district commanders generally put their own construction upon the Reconstruction acts, and in registration and other matters were mainly a law unto themselves. Accordingly, at the request of the President, Attorney-General Stansbery furnished an opinion upon the interpretation of the Military Government bills, so far as they related to registration and the right of voting, and this opinion made the number of disfranchised persons less than had been generally supposed; and the President issued an order to the district commanders to govern themselves by the opinion of the Attorney-General. Meanwhile, registration offices were opened in every section of the South, and, during the summer, sundry members of Congress, among others Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, and Representative William D. Kelly, of Pennsylvania, traversed the country, addressing large gatherings of negroes, and urging them to vote the Republican ticket.

According to adjournment, Congress reassembled July 4. In answer to the inquiry, President Johnson stated that he had no communications to make to either House. At the outset, resolutions were introduced declaring that further legislation, at this session, upon reconstruction would be inexpedient, and that the business should be confined to removing obstructions placed, or likely to be placed, in the way of the execution of the acts heretofore adopted. But several bills were at once introduced into both Houses, with a view of defining and explaining the original and supplementary acts. These were referred to the Reconstruction Committee, and resulted in a bill, the text of which is given under the head of the Explanatory Reconstruction Act, which was passed, July 13, in the House by a vote of 111 to 23, and, in the Senate, by a vote of 31 to 6—sixteen Senators absent or not voting. Congress having thus declared what was "the true intent and meaning" of the act of March 2, 1867, the bill went to the President, who returned it, July 19, with his veto, in which he declared that all his previous objections to the former bills applied to this, with others specially pertinent, since it appears by this declaratory act that the military government over ten States is to have "unlimited authority over the Courts and over all the officers of the State, legislative, executive, and judicial;" it gives military commanders the power to suspend or remove from office any officer or person holding any civil or military office or duty in their districts; they are authorized to fill vacancies thus created by the detail of any officer, or soldier of the army, thus transferring such officer or soldier into a civil officer, so that he may be a Governor, a Legislator, or a Judge, however unfit for the duty. He then urges that the legal existence of the State now made military districts, has been recognized in various ways by Congress and the Courts; by the appointment of District Attorneys and Marshals; the Internal Revenue laws describe them as States; the Chief-Justice has recently held a Circuit Court in North Carolina, and if North Carolina is not a State, every proceeding of that Court was null and void. In concluding this veto, the President referred to the attempts made by Congress to strip the Executive Department of some of its constitutional powers, and declared his intention, while the obligation rested on him as Chief Executive, to see that the laws are faithfully executed, never willingly to surrender the trust or the powers given for their execution. The bill was repassed over the veto in the House by a vote of 100 to 22, and in the Senate by a vote of 30 to 6—seventeen Senators not voting or absent. Congress then passed a bill appropriating $1,675,000, "for the purpose of carrying out the Reconstruction acts," which the President vetoed; but it was repassed over the veto in the House by 100 to 24, and in the Senate by 32 to 4. The House passed a vote of thanks to Generals Sheridan, Sickles, Pope, and Schofield, for services as Department Commanders; and received, July 12, from Secretary Stanton, copies of all the correspondence between the War Department and the District Commanders. The passage of the Explanatory act was the main business of the short session of sixteen days; and Congress, July 20, adjourned, to reassemble November 21, 1867.

This summary includes what President Lincoln, President Johnson, and the Southern States have attempted in the way of restoration, and what the Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Congresses have done towards reconstruction.

The Military Districts.

The assignment of commanders to the military districts was by orders issued from the headquarters of the army, March 11, 12, and 15, 1867. From the moment of their arrival at their respective commands, the several generals proceeded to carry out the "act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States," by making arrangements to regulate and control all local elections in accordance with what they presumed to be the views and desires of the dominant party in Congress. Order No. 1, March 13, of General J. M. Schofield, commanding the First District (Virginia), declared that "all officers under the existing provisional government of the State" might "continue to perform the duties of their respective offices * * until their successors shall be duly elected and qualified according to the act of Congress." April 2, he issued an order respecting boards of registration, detailing for the board five captains of the regular army. The same day he issued another order suspending all elections, State, county, or municipal, till the registration should be completed; and April 5, another order, stating that all officers hereafter elected or appointed, in addition to the oath of office prescribed by the State, must take the Test Oath prescribed by Congress. In the Second District, in an order dated March 21, General D. E. Sickles declared that "the civil government now existing in North Carolina and South Carolina is provisional only, and in all respects subject to the paramount authority of the United States at any time to abolish, modify, control, or supersede the same." April 1, he refused to permit the election of a Sheriff in Richland District, telegraphing to the general in command that when the term of the present incumbent expired, a successor would be "appointed." In the Third District (Georgia, Florida, and Alabama), General Wager Swayne ordered, March 28, that "by direction of General Grant, all State and local elections * * are disallowed pending the arrival of the District Commander (John Pope) and his order in the premises." General Pope's first order, April 1, announced that "no elections would be held in any of the States comprised in this military district, except such as are provided for in the acts of Congress, and in the manner therein established;" and that vacancies occurring "before the prescribed registration of voters is completed will be filled by appointment of the general commanding the district." April 8, he ordered that the district commanders should appoint "supervisors of registration." In the Fourth District (Mississippi and Arkansas), General E. O. C. Ord announced his appointment and assumption of his command March 28, and stated that such orders as were necessary to carry out the acts of March 2 and 23 would be duly published. In the Fifth District (Louisiana and Texas), March 9, General Sheridan prohibited an election for certain city officers in New Orleans, ordered by the Legislature for March 11, "that body, at a special session, having refused to postpone said election." March 27, he removed from office Andrew S. Herron, Attorney-General of the State of Louisiana; James T. Monroe, Mayor of New Orleans; and Edmund Abell, Judge of the First District Court of New Orleans, and appointed other officers in their places. April 16, he appointed a Board of Registers for the Parish of Orleans, and Brevet Brigadier-General J. W. Forsyth was directed "to supervise the Board of Registration." April 15, he appointed a Military Commission, to try such persons as might be brought before it. In all the districts orders were issued declaring that the military administrations would be conducted according to the acts of Congress of March 2 and 23.

It will be seen that, from the outset, the district commanders administered the acts of March solely with reference to the military manipulation of elections. They, however, used their own discretion in regard to other matters. In Mobile, General Swayne, by command of General Pope, forbade the police from wearing gray uniform, as the City Council had directed. Subsequently, several policemen were removed, and, in every instance, negroes were substituted. In South Carolina, May 20, General Sickles issued an order prohibiting the distillation of grain. May 24, General Pope issued an order districting Georgia and Alabama for purposes of registration, placing a negro on every Board of Registration. In Virginia, May 28, General Schofield ordered the appointment of military commissioners, to be selected from officers of the army and the Freedmen's Bureau, and to command (with "sufficient military force") "all local police or other forces." These Commissioners were "clothed with all the power of magistrates," and when they tried a man, the commanding general was to give a decision on report of the case; but till such decision was announced, "the orders of the Military Commission will be paramount." While each commander was thus placing his own construction upon the acts of Congress, in June the President issued an order that the military commanders should guide themselves, in their interpretation of the Reconstruction acts, by the opinion of the Att'y-General—whereupon Gen. Sickles resigned the command of the Second District. June 4, Gen. Sheridan removed Gov. Wells, of Louisiana. Subsequently, the Attorney-General furnished a second opinion, that the district commanders had no right to remove civil officers. Nevertheless, July 30, Gen. Sheridan issued a special order removing Gov. Throckmorton, of Texas, and appointing Mr. E. P. Pease in his place.

The correspondence between the War Department and the district commanders, called for by the House, and furnished by Secretary Stanton, July 12, affords the information that Gens. Pope and Sheridan had inquired whether the opinion of the Attorney-General as to registration, &c., was to be considered binding upon them, and that Gen. Grant had replied that it had not been put in the form of an order, and he presumed it was not so intended by the President; the commanders were directed to put their own construction upon the military bills, till ordered to do otherwise. In expressing his dissent from Gen. Ord's views respecting registration in the 4th District, Gen. Grant says: "The law, however, makes the district commanders their own interpreters of their power and duty under it; and, in my opinion, the Attorney-General or myself can no more than give our opinion of the meaning of the law; neither can enforce his views against the judgment of those made responsible for the faithful execution of the law, the district commanders."

President Johnson, August 17, prepared an order removing Gen. Sheridan from the 5th District, and appointing Gen. Thomas to that command. This order was submitted, for suggestion, to Gen. Grant, and a correspondence followed, Gen. Grant urging the retention of Sheridan in his command. The President replied at length, stating that Sheridan's rule had been of "absolute tyranny," that his course had even "seriously interfered with a harmonious, satisfactory, and speedy execution of the acts of Congress," and that alone was "sufficient to justify a change." Gen. Grant yielded, and, August 26, issued the President's order removing Gen. Sheridan, and Gen. Hancock was assigned to the command. At the same time the order was issued removing Gen. Sickles from command of the Second District, and assigning Gen. Canby in his place. The President, September 3 issued a proclamation declaring that military officers are sworn to obey the orders of the President, and enjoining all military and civil officers "to render due submission to the laws and decrees of the Courts of the United States," and to "sustain the authority of the laws," and "to maintain the supremacy of the Federal Constitution." General Sickles, considering this proclamation a censure of his course as Commander of the Second District, addressed to General Grant a vindication of his conduct. He had ordered one of his officers to disregard a certain process issued by the United States District Court; General Grant ordered Sickles to obey the process; but subsequently, upon receipt of Sickles' statement of the case in question, General Grant rescinded his order. Afterwards General Sickles complied with the process of the Court. Immediately before Sickles' removal, the President received, August 24, an opinion from Acting Attorney-General Binckley, that the course of General Sickles was wholly unwarranted, a manifest usurpation of power; that it was the duty of the Executive to maintain the authority of the Judiciary; and that the President should promptly repress the contumacy thus disclosed to him. Whereupon, General Sickles was removed.

Meanwhile, in all the districts registration was conducted under military supervision—every opportunity being afforded to the negroes, and every restriction being thrown in the way of the great body of whites by the boards of registration. On another page will be found the results of this remarkable registration. Subsequent elections in several of the districts were still more under military control, in many instances negroes coming in armed battalions to the polls; and formal charges have been made that in several cases arms and equipments for these negro political organizations were issued from the military commands and from agencies of the Freedmen's Bureau. These elections were to decide for or against calling conventions to frame new State constitutions, and to provide for the appointment of provisional civil officers. Whether or not the conventions were under military control, is sufficiently indicated in the case of the convention convened at Montgomery, Alabama, November 5. Agents and employes of the Freedmen's Bureau are declared to have been "members" of the convention. General Pope went from Atlanta, Georgia, and was in Montgomery when the convention opened. After the organization, November 8, the following resolution was introduced:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to wait upon Major-General Pope, and confer with him in regard to organizing a provisional government for this State, and vacating all offices of the pretended government within the next twenty days.

This resolution was tabled by the close vote of 45 to 42, and led to the adoption of yet more summary measures. The convention was declared by one member to be "not a popular assembly, but a Congressional Convention;" and the proceedings at Montgomery represent the method of "military" reconstruction in the other districts.

September 3, 1867—Warns all persons against obstructing or hindering the execution of the Constitution or the laws; and enjoining all military and civil officers "to render due submission to these laws and the decrees of the courts of the United States; and to give all the aid in their power necessary to the prompt execution of all said laws, decrees, judgments, and processes.

September 7, 1867—Extending Full Pardon to Certain Persons Who Were Engaged in the Late Rebellion.

Whereas, in the month of July, anno Domini 1861, the two Houses of Congress, with extraordinary unanimity, solemnly declared that the war then existing was not waged on the part of the government in any spirit of oppression, nor for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, nor purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of the States, but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution, and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired, and that as soon as these objects should be accomplished the war ought to cease;

And whereas, the President of the United States, on the eighth day of December, anno Domini 1863, and on the twenty-sixth day of March, anno Domini 1864, did, with the objects of suppressing the then existing rebellion, of inducing all persons to return to their loyalty, and of restoring the authority of the United States, issue proclamations offering amnesty and pardon to all persons who had directly or indirectly participated in the then existing rebellion, except as in those proclamations was specified and reserved;

And whereas, the President of the United States did, on the twenty-ninth day of May, anno Domini 1865, issue a further proclamation with the same objects before mentioned, and to the end that the authority of the government of the United States might be restored, and that peace, order, and freedom might be established, and the President did, by the said last-mentioned proclamation, proclaim and declare that he thereby granted to all persons who had directly or indirectly participated in the then existing rebellion, except as therein excepted, amnesty and pardon, with restoration of all rights and property, except as to slaves, and except in certain cases where legal proceedings had been instituted, but upon condition that such persons should take and subscribe an oath therein prescribed, which oath should be registered for permanent preservation;

And whereas, in and by the said last-mentioned proclamation of the twenty-ninth day of May, anno Domini 1865, fourteen extensive classes of persons, therein specially described, were altogether excepted and excluded from the benefits thereof;

And whereas, the President of the United States did, on the second day of April, anno Domini 1866, issue a proclamation declaring that the insurrection was at an end, and was thenceforth to be so regarded,

And whereas, there now exists no organized armed resistance of misguided citizens or others to the authority of the United States in the States of Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Florida, and Texas, and the laws can be sustained and enforced therein by the proper civil authority, State or Federal, and the people of said States are well and loyally disposed, and have conformed, or, if permitted to do so, will conform in their legislation to the condition of affairs growing out of the amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting slavery within the limits and jurisdiction of the United States;

And whereas, there no longer exists any reasonable ground to apprehend, within the States which were involved in the late rebellion, any renewal thereof, or any unlawful resistance by the people of said States to the Constitution and laws of the United States;

And whereas, large standing armies, military occupation, martial law, military tribunals, and the suspension of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus and the right of trial by jury, are, in time of peace, dangerous to public liberty, incompatible with the individual rights of the citizen, contrary to the genius and spirit of our free institutions, and exhaustive of the national resources, and ought not, therefore, to be sanctioned or allowed, except in cases of actual necessity for repelling invasion or suppressing insurrection or rebellion;

And whereas, a retaliatory or vindictive policy, attended by unnecessary disqualifications, pains, penalties, confiscations, and disfranchisements, now, as always, could only tend to hinder reconciliation among the people and national restoration, while it must seriously embarrass, obstruct, and repress popular energies and national industry and enterprise;

And whereas, for these reasons, it is now deemed essential to the public welfare, and to the more perfect restoration of constitutional law and order, that the said last-mentioned proclamation, so as aforesaid issued on the twenty-ninth day of May, anno Domini 1865, should be modified, and that the full and beneficent pardon conceded thereby should be opened and further extended to a large number of the persons who, by its aforesaid exceptions, have been hitherto excluded from executive clemency;

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare that the full pardon described in the said proclamation of the twenty-ninth day of May, anno Domini, 1865, shall henceforth be opened and extended to all persons who, directly or indirectly, participated in the late rebellion, with the restoration of all privileges, immunities, and rights of property, except as to property with regard to slaves, and except in cases of legal proceedings under the laws of the United States; but upon this condition, nevertheless: that every such person who shall seek to avail himself of this proclamation shall take and subscribe the following oath, and shall cause the same to be registered for permanent preservation, in the same manner and with the same effect as with the oath prescribed in the said proclamation of the twenty-ninth day of May, 1865, namely:

"I, ——— ———, do solemnly swear (or affirm), in presence of Almighty God, that I will henceforth faithfully support, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Union of the States thereunder; and that I will, in like manner, abide by and faithfully support all laws and proclamations which have been made during the late rebellion with reference to the emancipation of slaves. So help me God."

The following persons, and no others, are excluded from the benefits of this proclamation, and of the said proclamation of the twenty-ninth day of May, 1865, namely:

First. The chief or pretended chief executive officers, including the President, the Vice-President, and all heads of departments of the pretended confederate or rebel government, and all who were agents thereof in foreign states and countries, and all who held, or pretended to hold, in the service of the said pretended confederate government, a military rank or title above the grade of brigadier-general, or naval rank or title above that of captain, and all who were or pretended to be Governors of States, while maintaining, aiding, abetting, or submitting to and acquiescing in the rebellion.

Second. All persons who in any way treated otherwise than as lawful prisoners of war persons who in any capacity were employed or engaged in the military or naval service of the United States.

Third. All persons who, at the time they may seek to obtain the benefits of this proclamation, are actually in civil, military, or naval confinement or custody, or legally held to bail, either before or after conviction, and all persons who were engaged directly or indirectly in the assassination of the late President of the United States, or in any plot or conspiracy in any manner therewith connected.

In testimony whereof, I have signed these presents with my hand, and have caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, the seventh day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand [SEAL.] eight hundred and sixty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-second.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President;
WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Sec. of State.

Tenure of Office Bill.

AN ACT regulating the tenure of certain civil offices.

Be it enacted &c., That every person holding any civil office to which he has been appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and every person who shall hereafter be appointed to any such office, and shall become duly qualified to act therein, is, and shall be, entitled to hold such office until a successor shall have been in like manner appointed and duly qualified, except as herein otherwise provided: Provided, That the Secretaries of State, of the Treasury, of War, of the Navy, and of the Interior, the Postmaster General, and the Attorney General, shall hold their offices respectively for and during the term of the President by whom they may have been appointed and for one month thereafter, subject to removal by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

SEC. 2. That when any officer appointed as aforesaid, excepting judges of the United States courts, shall, during a recess of the Senate, be shown, by evidence satisfactory to the President, to be guilty of misconduct in office, or crime, or for any reason shall become incapable or legally disqualified to perform its duties, in such case, and in no other, the President may suspend such officer and designate some suitable person to perform temporarily the duties of such office until the next meeting of the Senate, and until the case shall be acted upon by the Senate; and such person so designated shall take the oaths and give the bonds required by law to be taken and given by the person duly appointed to fill such office; and in such case it shall be the duty of the President, within twenty days after the first day of such next meeting of the Senate, to report to the Senate such suspension, with the evidence and reasons for his action in the case and the name of the person so designated to perform the duties of such office. And if the Senate shall concur in such suspension and advise and consent to the removal of such officer, they shall so certify to the President, who may thereupon remove such officer, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint another person to such office. But if the Senate shall refuse to concur in such suspension, such officer so suspended shall forthwith resume the functions of his office, and the powers of the person so performing its duties in his stead shall cease, and the official salary and emoluments of such officer shall, during such suspension, belong to the person so performing the duties thereof, and not to the officer so suspended: Provided, however, That the President, in case he shall become satisfied that such suspension was made on insufficient grounds, shall be authorized, at any time before reporting such suspension to the Senate as above provided, to revoke such suspension and reinstate such officer in the performance of the duties of his office.

SEC. 3. That the President shall have power to fill all vacancies which may happen during the recess of the Senate, by reason of death or resignation, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session thereafter. And if no appointment, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall be made to such office so vacant or temporarily filled as aforesaid during such next session of the Senate, such office shall remain in abeyance, without any salary, fees or emoluments attached thereto, until the same shall be filled by appointment thereto, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and during such time all the powers and duties belonging to such office shall be exercised by such other officer as may by law exercise such powers and duties in case of a vacancy in such office.

SEC. 4. That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend the term of any office the duration of which is limited by law.

SEC. 5. That if any person shall, contrary to the provisions of this act, accept any appointment to or employment in any office, or shall hold or exercise, or attempt to hold or exercise, any such office or employment, he shall be deemed, and is hereby declared to be, guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, upon trial and conviction thereof, he shall be punished therefor by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 6. That every removal, appointment, or employment, made, had, or exercised, contrary to the provisions of this act, and the making, signing, sealing, countersigning, or issuing of any commission or letter of authority for or in respect to any such appointment or employment, shall be deemed, and are hereby declared to be high misdemeanors, and, upon trial and conviction thereof, every person guilty thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both said punishments, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That the President shall have power to make out and deliver, after the adjournment of the Senate, commissions for all officers whose appointment shall have been advised and consented to by the Senate.

SEC. 7. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Senate, at the close of each session thereof, to deliver to the Secretary of the Treasury, and to each of his Assistants, and to each of the Auditors, and to each of the Comptrollers in the Treasury, and to the Treasurer, and to the Register of the Treasury, a full and complete list, duly certified, of all persons who shall have been nominated to and rejected by the Senate during such session, and a like list of all the offices to which nominations shall have been made and not confirmed and filled at such session.

SEC. 8. That whenever the President shall, without the advice and consent of the Senate, designate, authorize, or employ any person to perform the duties of any office, he shall forthwith notify the Secretary of the Treasury thereof; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury thereupon to communicate such notice to all the proper accounting and disbursing officers of his department.

SEC. 9. That no money shall be paid or received from the treasury, or paid or received from or retained out of any public moneys or funds of the United States, whether in the treasury or not, to or by or for the benefit of any person appointed to or authorized to act in or holding or exercising the duties or functions of any office contrary to the provisions of this act; nor shall any claim, account, voucher, order, certificate, warrant, or other instrument providing for or relating to such payment, receipt, or retention, be presented, passed, allowed, approved, certified, or paid by any officer of the United States, or by any person exercising the functions or performing the duties of any office or place of trust under the United States, for or in respect to such office, or the exercising or performing the functions or duties thereof; and every person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, upon trial and conviction thereof, shall be punished therefor by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding ten years, or both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Passed March 2, 1867.

The President's Veto.

To the Senate of the United States:

I have carefully examined the bill "to regulate the tenure of certain civil offices." The material portion of the bill is contained in the first section, and is of the effect following, namely: * * * These provisions are qualified by a reservation in the fourth section, "that nothing contained in the bill shall be construed to extend the term of any office, the duration of which is limited by law." In effect the bill provides that the President shall not remove from their places any of the civil officers whose terms of service are not limited by law, without the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States. The bill in this respect conflicts, in my judgment, with the Constitution of the United States. The question, as Congress is well aware, is by no means a new one. That the power of removal is constitutionally vested in the President of the United States is a principle which has been not more distinctly declared by judicial authority and judicial commentators than it has been uniformly practiced upon by the legislative and executive departments of the government. The question arose in the House of Representatives so early as the 16th of June, 1789, on the bill for establishing an executive department denominated "The Department of Foreign Affairs." The first clause of the bill, after recapitulating the functions of that officer and defining his duties, had these words: "to be removable from office by the President of the United States." It was moved to strike out these words, and the motion was sustained with great ability and vigor. It was insisted that the President could not constitutionally exercise the power of removal exclusively of the Senate; that the Federalist so interpreted the Constitution when arguing for its adoption by the several States; that the Constitution had nowhere given the President power of removal, either expressly or by strong implication, but, on the contrary, had distinctly provided for removals from office by impeachment only. A construction which denied the power of removal by the President was further maintained by arguments drawn from the danger of the abuse of the power; from the supposed tendency of an exposure of public officers to capricious removal to impair the efficiency of the civil service; from the alleged injustice and hardship of displacing incumbents dependent upon their official stations without sufficient consideration; from a supposed want of responsibility on the part of the President, and from an imagined defect of guarantees against a vicious President who might incline to abuse the power. On the other hand, an exclusive power of removal by the President was defended as a true exposition of the text of the Constitution. It was maintained that there are certain causes for which persons ought to be removed from office without being guilty of treason, bribery, or malfeasance, and that the nature of things demands that it should be so. "Suppose," it was said, "a man becomes insane by the visitation of God, and is likely to ruin our affairs, are the hands of the government to be confined from warding off the evil? Suppose a person in office, not possessing the talents he was judged to have at the time of the appointment, is the error not to be corrected? Suppose he acquires vicious habits and incurable indolence, or total neglect of the duties of his office, which shall work mischief to the public welfare, is there no way to arrest the threatened danger? Suppose he becomes odious and unpopular by reason of the measures he pursues—and this he may do without committing any positive offence against the law—must he preserve his office in despite of the popular will? Suppose him grasping for his own aggrandizement and the elevation of his connections by every means short of the treason defined by the Constitution, hurrying your affairs to the precipice of destruction, endangering your domestic tranquility, plundering you of the means of defence, alienating the affections of your allies and promoting the spirit of discord must the tardy, tedious, desultory road by way of impeachment be traveled to overtake the man who, barely confining himself within the letter of the law, is employed in drawing off the vital principle of the government. The nature of things, the great object of society, the express objects of the Constitution itself, require that this thing should be otherwise. To unite the Senate with the President in the exercise of the power," it was said, "would involve us in the most serious difficulty. Suppose a discovery of any of those events should take place when the Senate is not in session, how is the remedy to be applied? The evil could be avoided in no other way than by the Senate sitting always." In regard to the danger of the power being abused if exercised by one man, it was said "that the danger is as great with respect to the Senate, who are assembled from various parts of the continent with different impressions and opinions;" "that such a body is more likely to misuse the power of removal than the man whom the united voice of America calls to the Presidential chair. As the nature of government requires the power of removal," it was maintained "that it should be exercised in this way by the hand capable of exerting itself with effect; and the power must be conferred on the President by the Constitution as the executive officer of the government." Mr. Madison, whose adverse opinion in the Federalist had been relied upon by those who denied the exclusive power, now participated in the debate. He declared that he had reviewed his former opinions, and he summed up the whole case as follows: "The Constitution affirms that the executive power is vested in the President. Are there exceptions to this proposition? Yes, there are. The Constitution says that in appointing to office, the Senate shall be associated with the President, unless in the case of inferior officers, when the law shall otherwise direct. Have we (that is, Congress) a right to extend this exception? I believe not. If the Constitution has invested all executive power in the President, I venture to assert that the legislature has no right to diminish or modify his executive authority. The question now resolves itself into this: Is the power of displacing an executive power? I conceive that if any power whatsoever is in the Executive, it is the power of appointing, overseeing, and controlling those who execute the laws. If the Constitution had not qualified the power of the President in appointing to office by associating the Senate with him in that business, would it not be clear that he would have the right, by virtue of his executive power, to make such appointment? Should we be authorized, in defiance of that clause in the Constitution—'The executive power shall be vested in the President'—to unite the Senate with the President in the appointment to office? I conceive not. If it is admitted that we should not be authorized to do this, I think it may be disputed whether we have a right to associate them in removing persons from office, the one power being as much of an executive nature as the other; and the first one is authorized by being excepted out of the general rule established by the Constitution in these words: 'The executive power shall be vested in the President.'" The question thus ably and exhaustively argued, was decided by the House of Representatives, by a vote of thirty-four to twenty, in favor of the principle that the executive power of removal is vested by the Constitution in the Executive, and in the Senate by the casting vote of the Vice-President. The question has often been raised in subsequent times of high excitement, and the practice of the government has nevertheless conformed in all cases to the decision thus early made. The question was revived during the administration of President Jackson, who made, as is well recollected, a very large number of removals, which were made an occasion of close and rigorous scrutiny and remonstrance. The subject was long and earnestly debated in the Senate, and the early construction of the Constitution was nevertheless freely accepted as binding and conclusive upon Congress.

Chancellor Kent's remarks on the subject are as follows: "On the first organization of the government it was made a question whether the power of removal in case of officers appointed to hold at pleasure resided nowhere but in the body which appointed, and, of course, whether the consent of the Senate was not requisite to remove. This was the construction given to the Constitution while it was pending for ratification before the State conventions, by the author of the Federalist. But the construction which was given to the Constitution by Congress, after great consideration and discussion, was different. The words of the act (establishing the Treasury Department) are: 'And whenever the same shall be removed from office by the President of the United States, or in any other case of vacancy in the office, the assistant shall act.' This amounted to a legislative construction of the Constitution, and it has ever since been acquiesced in and acted upon as a decisive authority in the case. It applies equally to every other officer of the government appointed by the President, whose term of duration is not specially declared. It is supported by the weighty reason that the subordinate officers in the executive department ought to hold at the pleasure of the head of the department, because he is invested generally with the executive authority, and the participation in that authority by the Senate was an exception to a general principle and ought to be taken strictly. The President is the great responsible officer for the faithful execution of the law, and the power of removal was incidental to that duty, and might often be requisite to fulfil it." Thus has the important question presented by this bill been settled, in the language of the late Daniel Webster, (who, while dissenting from it, admitted that it was settled,) by construction, settled by precedent, settled by the practice of the government, and settled by statute. The events of the last war furnished a practical confirmation of the wisdom of the Constitution as it has hitherto been maintained, in many of its parts, including that which is now the subject of consideration. When the war broke out rebel enemies, traitors, abettors, and sympathizers were found in every department of the government, as well in the civil service as in the land and naval military service. They were found in Congress and among the keepers of the Capitol; in foreign missions; in each and all of the executive departments; in the judicial service; in the Post office, and among the agents for conducting Indian affairs. Upon probable suspicion they were promptly displaced by my predecessor, so far as they held their offices under executive authority, and their duties were confided to new and loyal successors. No complaints against that power or doubts of its wisdom were entertained in any quarter. I sincerely trust and believe that no such civil war is likely to occur again. I cannot doubt, however, that in whatever form, and on whatever occasion sedition can raise an effort to hinder, or embarrass, or defeat, the legitimate action of this government, whether by preventing the collection of revenue, or disturbing the public peace, or separating the States, or betraying the country to a foreign enemy, the power of removal from office by the Executive, as it has heretofore existed and been practiced, will be found indispensable. Under these circumstances, as a depository of the executive authority of the nation, I do not feel at liberty to unite with Congress in reversing it by giving my approval to the bill. At the early day when this question was settled, and, indeed, at the several periods when it has subsequently been agitated, the success of the Constitution of the United States, as a new and peculiar system of free representative government, was held doubtful in other countries, and was even a subject of patriotic apprehension among the American people themselves. A trial of nearly eighty years, through the vicissitudes of foreign conflicts and of civil war, is confidently regarded as having extinguished all such doubts and apprehensions for the future. During that eighty years the people of the United States have enjoyed a measure of security, peace, prosperity, and happiness, never surpassed by any nation. It cannot be doubted that the triumphant success of the Constitution is due to the wonderful wisdom with which the functions of government were distributed between the three principal departments—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial—and to the fidelity with which each has confined itself or been confined by the general voice of the nation within its peculiar and proper sphere. While a just, proper, and watchful jealousy of executive power constantly prevails, as it ought ever to prevail, yet it is equally true that an efficient Executive, capable, in the language of the oath prescribed to the President, of executing the laws and, within the sphere of executive action, of preserving, protecting, and defending the Constitution of the United States, is an indispensable security for tranquility at home, and peace, honor, and safety abroad. Governments have been erected in many countries upon our model. If one or many of them have thus far failed in fully securing to their people the benefits which we have derived from our system, it may be confidently asserted that their misfortune has resulted from their unfortunate failure to maintain the integrity of each of the three great departments while preserving harmony among them all. Having at an early period accepted the Constitution in regard to the executive office in the sense in which it was interpreted with the concurrence of its founders, I have found no sufficient grounds in the arguments now opposed to that construction, or in any assumed necessity of the times, for changing those opinions. For these reasons I return the bill to the Senate, in which House it originated, for the further consideration of Congress which the Constitution prescribes. Insomuch as the several parts of the bill which I have not considered are matters chiefly of detail, and are based altogether upon the theory of the Constitution from which I am obliged to dissent, I have not thought it necessary to examine them with a view to make them an occasion of distinct and special objections. Whenever administration fails, or seems to fail, in securing any of the great ends for which republican government is established, the proper course seems to be to renew the original spirit and forms of the Constitution itself.

New York has 46,000 square miles. Nevada has twice as many square miles as New York, and Kansas and Nebraska have each nearly twice as many. Colorado and Utah are more than twice as large as New York; Montana more than three times; California more than four times, and Dacotah more than five times. 7,000,000 acres of public lands have been disposed of during the past year. There are now 37,000 miles of completed railroad in this country, which, since their commencement is at the rate of 1,000 miles a year. In course of construction 17,860 miles of railroad. For these roads completed, and for those in contemplation, the government has granted over 184,800,000 acres of land, and to the Pacific Roads over 24,000 acres of land.

Growth of Cereals in 1867.

From the reports to the Agricultural Bureau at Washington, the following statements respecting the growth of cereals in the United States in 1867, are compiled:

Wheat.—While few localities have exhibited large yields per acre, and some have caused comparative disappointment by an average product less than was confidently expected at harvesting, the sum total in bushels will exceed that of any harvest hitherto gathered in this country. It will surmount the figures of last year by forty to fifty millions; but will not reach the amount which should have been attained, upon the ratio of increase made between 1850 and 1860, by twenty millions. As an approximate estimate, upon present data, 220,000,000 to 225,000,000 bushels may be received as the crop of the entire country for 1867. In some of the Eastern States, in Texas, and Kansas, the figures scarcely equal those of last year; in Texas the reduction is fully half. In the Northwestern States the increase is variable and moderate, as follows: Illinois, 7 per cent.; Minnesota, 8 per cent.; Michigan, 13; Iowa, 15; Wisconsin, 16. The belt of States in the Ohio valley, which suffered so unusually last year, and made but four, five, six, or eight-tenths of a crop respectively, and averaged together but half a crop, have made a heavy increase upon those figures. The largest is made by Ohio, 130 per cent., as might be expected, the deficiency having been greatest there; Indiana is placed at 85 per cent. increase; West Virginia, 51; Kentucky, 28. In the Atlantic States the greatest deficiency last year was in Pennsylvania, and the increase there this year is 57 per cent. The Southern States show a material enlargement in the area of wheat, from an evident intention to become more nearly self-supporting and independent than formerly. This is particularly noticeable in Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, and Arkansas. The quality of wheat is greatly superior to that of last year; it is almost universally sound and dry, but in many localities there may be found from a third to a half deficient in weight, lacking in plumpness, or slightly shriveled, and passing as No. 2, being less than 58 pounds to the bushel. There is also a greater tendency to cleanliness and care in preparing the grain for the market. High prices and the marked discrimination of buyers are doing good service in this direction. Old wheat will show a reduction as compared with last year, when the old stock was also small. The stock of old wheat has not been reduced so low for many years, if ever.

Oats.—The yield of oats has proved less than was expected in Maine, Vermont, New York, Virginia, Mississippi, Texas, Tennessee, and Kentucky; in Michigan, no increase over last year is reported, but most of the Western States have made a comparative gain. As in the case of corn and wheat, the majority of the Southern States added to their area in oats, and have a larger product. The quality and yield are a fair average in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois; in Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa, they are generally of superior quality, and have threshed out very satisfactorily. The aggregate estimate will exceed 280,000,000 bushels—about three per cent. above that of 1866.

Rye.—This grain has made a very uniform growth and yielded an average product, with few exceptions. The report indicates a larger total product than last year, and the quality is uniform in most of the States. Those which show a slight depreciation are Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Delaware, Virginia, Tennessee, and Nebraska. In the Southern States the crop is generally good. The estimate for all the States excepting those on the Pacific is 21,900,000 bushels. This is an increase of four per cent. over the product of last year.

Barley.—The barley crop is slightly deficient—about a half million bushels, or four per cent. as compared with the crop of last year. Illinois, Kansas, Pennsylvania, New York, and all the Eastern States, except Massachusetts and Connecticut, share in the deficiency. New York being the principal grower, producing nearly forty per cent. of the crop, a deficiency there of thirteen per cent. is equivalent to half a million bushels. The comparative losses and gains of all the other States together will balance each other.

Corn.—West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, a belt of which suffered last year by the winter-killing of wheat, were affected by a drought of considerable severity, which will cause a heavy reduction of the general aggregate. The tenor of the reports for this district differ little from those of September. To offset this deficiency in part, an increase, ranging from 7 to 17 per cent., is reported for the States of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Kansas. Delaware, Virginia, and North Carolina have small crops, and Pennsylvania is slightly deficient. The States further north and east have generally shown a slight increase, and the Southern States have made a comparatively heavy increase. The quality is uniformly good, leaving no doubt that the value of the entire crop, after deducting the deficiency in the Ohio valley, and allowing for an increase in almost all the other States, will be greater, not only in cash, but in the intrinsic life-sustaining and pork-producing power, than that of last year. As the deficiency occurs in the centre of the commercial pork-packing district, it will affect unduly the market, both for corn and pork, making the scarcity more prominent, while the comparative abundance of the South will greatly reduce the demand upon the West.

Religious Denominations in the United States.

The following statistics of churches and religious denominations in the United States, are from the report of Rev. Henry B. Smith, D.D., of the Union Theological Seminary, New York, to the Evangelical Alliance in session at Amsterdam, in 1867:

United Brethren, about 3,000 societies. Moravians about 12,000 communicants. Unitarians about 300 churches. Universalists include about 600,000 of the population. Friends or Quakers, orthodox, about 54,000 members. Friends or Quakers, Hicksites, about 40,000 members.

Freemasonry in the World.

It is estimated that at present, in round numbers, there are 1,250,000 Free and Accepted Masons scattered upon the face of the globe. Of this number some 150,000 are in England; 100,000 in Scotland, and 50,000 in Ireland. There are about 60,000 on the Continent of Europe; 300,000 in the United States, and 50,000 in other parts of the world.

Odd Fellowship in the United States.

The Grand Secretary of the Order in the United States, reports the membership at the present time to be 217,886, there having been an accession the past year of 33,764 members. The receipts for the past year have been $1,965,718.1, of which $1,760,123.56 were from bodies under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge, and $505,593.45 from bodies under the jurisdiction of the Grand Encampment. The total relief dispensed in the same time was $690,675.97, of which $625,820.25 were by the bodies under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge. The relief dispensed by the bodies under the jurisdiction of the Grand Encampment was $64,855 12.

Gold Yield of the Country.

The Gold yield of this country for the year 1867, is estimated as follows: Montana, $10,000,000; Idaho, $6,000,000; Oregon, $2,000,000; Colorado, 5,000,000; Nevada, $10,000,000; California, $25,000,000, and miscellaneous, $5,000,000. Total, $63,000,000.

St. Thomas.

This island in the West Indies will become the property of the United States so soon as Congress ratifies the treaty for its purchase, and makes the requisite appropriation. It is situate Lat. 18° 20′ 24″ N., Long. 64° 55′ 45″ W. Greatest length from E. to W., 17 miles; greatest breadth about 4½ miles. It contains 45 square miles, and 28,800 acres. Only about 2,500 acres are under cultivation, the soil being sandy and not fertile. Population. 12,800.

The number of births registered in London and twelve other large towns during the week ending October 19, 1867, was 4,387. Those in London alone were 2,171. The excess of births over deaths in the United Kingdom is now more than a thousand a day. In England it is 250,000 a year; in Ireland, 70,000; in Scotland, 40,000; and Wales makes up the balance. Allowing for emigration, the rate of increase is now estimated at 200,000 a year. The emigration from the United Kingdom in 52 years has exceeded six millions, and the decrease in Ireland during the last twenty-two years from this cause is 2,738,099. In 1845 the population of that country was estimated to be 8,295,061, in 1867 the estimate is 5,556,962.

Ohio is now the chief wool growing State, having 6,608,052 sheep, out of 32,650,797 in the whole United States. In 1866 the live stock of Ohio was valued at $151,000,000, which is greater than any other State except New York.

Tobacco Crop of the United States.

Statistics of the Tobacco Crop of the United States are very imperfectly kept; those for Kentucky and the Ohio River especially so. It is difficult to arrive at accurate figures, but the following will be found approximately correct:

DAILY, SEMI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

DECEMBER, 1867.

The grand results of the late elections, which have revived the drooping fortunes of the Democratic party, and have added to their invincible steadfastness the ardor and the confidence of victory in the contest approaching, have been due, in no inconsiderable degree, to reinforcements from the ranks of our opponents; but these very reinforcements, as well as the putting forth of our own strength, to which they are chiefly due, have been the direct consequence of the systematic and well directed-energies of workers throughout the country, who have labored while others slept; who see to-day the first fruits of their labor, and who are ready and eager to press forward to grander triumphs and the final victories which will crown their noble toil.

The same energy put forth now will bear a fuller harvest next Fall. The tide is with us to-day, against which we have been struggling for long and weary years. Taken at the flood, it will lead us on to victory.

There is but one way. Organize, organize, organize, and organize now. Experience has taught that in the long intervals between political campaigns there is no instrumentality so potent as a sound Democratic newspaper, which, weekly or oftener, comes to the home fireside, and there, with truth and cogency, sets forth the facts of the country's condition, and applies to them Democratic principles. No power is to be compared to this for making Democratic votes. One dollar spent for such a weekly visitor does more than ten dollars spent in any other way. Such is the opinion of leading statesmen of our party; such has been the successful practice of our opponents. Can they not be outdone with their own weapons, by getting together the active Democrats of each District, by dividing up the territory to be canvassed, by seeing to it that every Democrat who takes no paper now, subscribes to one; by inducing every doubtful voter to subscribe, and those who are unwilling or too poor to subscribe, supplying by gratuitous distribution, raising a fund among zealous and well-to-do friends for the purpose. Sevenfold the cost to every one of them will be saved in taxes.

This is ths work which will insure a Democratic triumph in 1868, and so restore Union, revive industry, and cut down the corruptions and burdens of the Government. "THE WORLD" will take its full share of this labor. It is supplied at the bare cost of the white paper on which it is printed. Eularge its influence by doubling, this year, the number of its readers.

"THE WORLD," AS OTHERS SEE IT.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 1867.

The undersigned would urge upon all the friends of a Liberal and Progressive Democracy the importance of preparing now for the next struggle with its enemies. Such preparation is too commonly postponed until the eve of elections. But we must begin now to plant the seed for the harvest of future victories.

Your co-operation is desired in a movement now making in every Northern State, county and town of the Union to increase the circulation of Democratic newspapers—of the various local journals which should nowhere be neglected—and of THE NEW YORK WORLD, which has a central position, a national circulation, and is the ablest advocate of a Liberal, Progressive Democracy.

A free press is the most effective weapon for combating popular error and achieving the political revolution which is indispensable to the country's prosperity, liberties, union and peace. We would, therefore, recommend the immediate formation of newspaper clubs in your town, and that you enlist the efforts of your friends and neighbors with your own, to place a Democratic newspaper, every week of the coming year, in the hands not only of every Democrat who can afford to pay for it, but also of those who cannot, and of every "doubtful" voter whose mind is accessible to the candid, earnest and able presentation of the truths and principles of Democratic freedom.

HORATIO SEYMOUR,
AMASA J. PARKER,
S. J. TILDEN,
JOHN T. HOFFMAN,
Chairman of the N.Y. Democratic State Central Committee.

New York, June 27th, 1866.

THE WORLD is the leading Democratic paper of the North, and, more than any other journal in this region, is to be regarded as the exponent and advocate of the principles and purposes of the Democratic party. By promoting its circulation you will render an important service to the cause, and at the same time do much to aid in the restoration of the South to all their rights under the Constitution. DEAN RICHMOND.

Montgomery, Ala., March 17th, 1866.

To the People of Alabama:

I heartily commend to you the New York WORLD as a sound Conservative newspaper, advocating the true principles of the Constitution and Union of our Fathers, and, in my judgment, it is the duty of all Southern men to support it by their means. I recommend it especially to my friends in Alabama. T. H. WATTS, Ex-Gov. Alabama.

Albany, N. Y. Jan. 26th, 1866.

THE WORLD, published at the City of New York, is the leading Democratic organ of the North, and will be, I trust, of the entire Union. Upon the doctrines it teaches we can all unite and raise the Democratic party once more, controlling and invincible. To accomplish a result so desirable to the welfare of the country, it is indispensable that a wide circulation be secured to it at the South as well as at the North. The earnest and effective advocacy by THE WORLD of a policy that shall secure to the Southern States all their rights under the Constitution, will, I trust, secure for it the co-operation and sympathy of all who desire such a result. AMASA J. PARKER.

THE WORLD, now the foremost journal in the land, and a powerful and effective advocate of Democratic principles. In the Presidential campaign of last year it did noble service for the success of our candidates, and in the campaign just closed in the Empire State it again did a good work. The news, miscellaneous, market and other departments of the WORLD are full and reliable. It is the newspaper of the age.—The Union Herald, Butler, Pa.

THE WORLD.—While we radically condemn its political sentiments, we admire its typography and news and literary departments, in which it is unexcelled. Without doubt it is the ablest organ of its party.—Republican, Lapeer, Mich.

Milledgeville, Ga., March 14th, 1866.

Having been long a reader of the New York WORLD I cheerfully commend its course as highly Conservative. No paper should be condemned by any reader for an occasional difference of opinion from him on particular points. Some latitude should be allowed for the independence of the Press. But I believe THE WORLD may be fully relied on for fidelity to great Conservative principles, which alone can work out the redemption of the South. CHARLES J. JENKINS, Gov. Georgia.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.—We consider this sheet as the ablest exponent of Democratic principles in the country. While there are other ably conducted journals * * * * which are true to the principles, instincts, and policy of the Democrats of the country, there is a superior wisdom and sounder discrimination exercised by THE WORLD, which is calculated to carry conviction, rather than to excite and incense the minds of those who would feel otherwise disposed to concur in many of the views presented. Democratic principles lie deeper, and require the exercise of deeper logic and more perfect and elaborate discussion than the principles of a party (if they can be so called), which are based on time-serving purposes, and on appeals to temporary passions and prejudices of men. If Democratic principles are to be maintained in the future, it can only best be done by a course of sound, candid, and consistent argument, and by logical and candid appeals to the judgment.

THE WORLD throughout the whole course of events since the war, has shown its devotion and attachment to the Government and institutions of the country. It has, with frankness and candor, but with boldness, proclaimed its ideas relative to the management of our public affairs, and has been the unflinching friend of the industry and the commerce of the country, as well as the vindicator of its great agricultural interests in all its ramified directions. We feel a pride in the ability and dignity with which it has been managed, and take great pleasure in earnestly recommending it, not only as a journal, but as a paper which can be relied on as a truthful chronicler of the times.—Expounder, Marshall, Mich.

Tallahasse, Fla., March 5th, 1866.

I regard THE WORLD as one of the ablest and most honest and useful newspapers published in the United States. I think its general circulation would greatly tend to the promotion of sound principles and the speedy restoration and stability of the Union.
DAVID S. WALKER, Gov. Florida.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.—This sterling Democratic journal stands at the head of all the dailies in the United States. It is the ablest edited; conducted upon the most dignified principles; is the most reliable in the latest news; and its financial and market reports are unrivalled. THE WEEKLY WORLD is conducted upon the same basis, and is unquestionably the best New York paper for general news, miscellany, &c., published.—Era, Cuba, N. Y.

Raleigh, N. C. Feb. 13th, 1866.

I beg to commend most heartily to the people of North Carolina the circulation of the New York WORLD. It is a valuable, ably conducted Conservative newspaper, advocates justice and moderation towards the South, and is calculated to do more for our people, in my opinion, than any other New York journal, as possessing more influence at home, and representing a large constituency. ZEBULON B. VANCE, Ex-Gov. N. C.

THE WORLD.—We esteem it the best and most reliable paper published in the City of New York. Its market reports can be relied upon with full confidence. It has correspondents in all parts of the globe, who furnish the latest and most reliable information and news, which is not surpassed, if equalled, by any of its contemporaries. The ability with which it has been conducted and edited is shown in the greatly increased circulation since it has been under the management of its present able head, Manton Marble.—Gazette, Delaware, N. Y.

It has always been the foremost paper in New York, not only in its editorial ability, which is conspicuous, but also in the character, and variety and reliability of its correspondence. Its news and commercial departments have always been ably conducted. From the first we have regarded its strength and taste as an honor to American journalism.—Daily News, Galveston, Texas.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.—It ranks as the leading exponent of Democratic principles and views, and fully, too. It is one of the most interesting, able, careful, and consistent journals in the country. We are glad of the evidences constantly to be perceived of its great and growing prosperity; it will soon beat the Herald in circulation, as it already does in enterprise, completeness of news, and reliability. No Democrat should touch such a time-serving, impolitic sheet as the Herald when such an available paper as the New York WORLD can be had. It is with pleasure we pay this tribute to a worthy journal, and it is done in honest faith.—Elmira Daily Gazette, N. Y.

The New York WORLD.—This is one of the ablest Democratic journals of the North, and is regarded as the most reliable exponent of the principles and aims of the Northern Democratic party.—Sentinel, Raleigh, N. C.

THE WORLD is one of the ablest papers of the North.—Federal Union, Milledgeville, Ga.

THE WORLD,—It is the best newspaper published in the City of New York.—Democrat and Advertiser, Bloomsburg, Pa.

THE WORLD has given a steady and efficient support to the principles of the Constitution, battling manfully against party corruption and radical innovation. As a general news and commercial journal THE WORLD is comprehensive and reliable.—Herald, Savannah, Ga.

THE WORLD is a truly conservative, national paper, and has a very extensive circulation in the North and West.—Federal Union, Milledgeville, Ga.

The New York WORLD.—One of the very best, if not the best, and most ably conducted journal in the United States.—Democratic Sentinel, Kitaning, Pa.

The New York WORLD.—Its several editions are now graded to meet the wants of every class of the reading public. The Daily supplies the news from all quarters as soon as, if not in advance, of all its contemporaries. The Weekly is emphatically the family newspaper of the World, embracing within its columns all that pertains to the general news of the day. We are pleased to note the thrift of this live Democratic paper at the head of the metropolitan list, and take this occasion to urge upon our country friends the practicability of getting up clubs for it.—Daily Union, Lockport, N. Y.

THE WORLD is, par excellence, the Democratic organ of the State of New York. It is as much a representative of that party, as the Tribune is of the Radical Republicans, and whoever would be correctly informed of the sentiments of the Northern Democracy—now become, the hope of the South—should subscribe to it. In our judgment, it is the ablest political paper in the country. Free from crotchets, tinctured with no destructive isms, it is the exponent of the wholesome doctrines of purer days, and, what is a matter of no small consideration, it is the mouth-piece of a great party, not of a little faction powerful for evil only.—Floridian, Tallahassee, Fla.

Differing toto cœlo from the New York WORLD in opinions, we can nevertheless recognize its ability. We cannot in conscience recommend it to anybody, but if people will have any Democratic paper they will find THE WORLD not only the ablest of that sort, but as a newspaper one of the best in the country. Its correspondence is able, very extensive, and except on political subjects, as reliable as it is interesting; its reports of public affairs, speeches, and notable events, are very thorough; and its editorials as able as they are detestable in principle and tone.—Journal and Courier, New Haven, Ct., Oct, 23.

The New York WORLD.—It is edited with singular ability, and has a large circulation, which necessarily give it influence. It is as a representative paper that it has importance in our eyes; for it gives utterance to the thoughts and expression to the wishes of the two millions of freemen who voted for McClellan in 1864, and are now sustaining the only policy through which we of the South can hope for peace for ourselves or our children.—Daily Times, Selma, Ala.

FOR TERMS, &c. SEE LAST PAGE OF COVER.

The New York WORLD.—Those of our readers who desire a good Democratic and miscellaneous newspaper from the great centre of trade and politics should subscribe for it. As a newspaper, its telegraphic correspondence, market, agricultural and other departments are always well filled with the latest and best variety.—Patriot and Union, Harrisburgh, Pa.

The New York WORLD—The justly accredited organ of the Constitutional Conservative Democratic party of the State of New York, and a reliable journal in all its details. This paper is moderate, and has the confidence of such men as Seymour, Parker, and all of that stamp of political character, who are known as constitutional men, and opposed to usurpations by a central power.—News and Mississippian, Jackson. Miss.

THE WORLD, the best newspaper in New York City, and the ablest Democratic paper in the country.—Gazette, Oswego, N. Y.

The New York WORLD.—As a newspaper, THE WORLD stands in the front rank of metropolitan journalism. It is very ably edited. Its leading articles, although mainly devoted to the advocacy of wrong principles, and starting from false premises, are nevertheless brilliant in style and profound in research. To those of our Democratic friends who are irrevocably joined to their idols, we recommend the New York WORLD, No other Democratic paper is worthy to be mentioned in conjunction with it.—Daily Times, Bangor, Me., Oct. 23.

We regard THE WORLD as one of the ablest conducted newspapers in New York City, and the best exponent of those Conservative strict construction Democratic views which built up the prosperity of the United States in the past, and which alone can preserve free institutions for the future. THE WORLD meets the wants of the people of the South as well as the patriotic masses of the North.—Daily Mail, Montgomery, Ala.

THE WORLD is the ablest and best Democratic paper in the country.—Mexico Independent, N. Y.

THE WORLD is by far the leading Democratic paper of the North. It is dignified and elegant in its conduct, and calculated to do an immense amount of good in the country THE WORLD is on the high road to a full and complete restoration of the Union. It is skillfully piloted, and is doing a noble work for the whole country. We commend it to the people of the South.—New Era, Atlanta, Ga.

Permit us to urge the importance of getting up a large club at every Post Office, and of giving "THE WORLD," in common with your local paper, a wide circulation. It will help the cause. Very truly yours,

The New York WORLD, at once the ablest and most progressive of the leading Democratic organs.—Albany Evening Journal.

The New York WORLD, by far the most able paper among the democratic organs.—Daily Eagle, Poughkeepsie.

THE WORLD.—The metropolitan organ of the Democratic sentiment of the country has donned a new dress of type. The WORLD—so beautifully printed, and, in the main, managed with such consummate ability—supplies to the supporters of Constitutional Liberty and Personal Rights (what they so pressingly needed) a noble first class cosmopolitan daily. In view of its many and comprehensive journalistic triumphs the WORLD may well face and flout its rivals with complacent courage.—Spirit of the Times, Batavia, N. Y.

The WORLD, speaks for the thought, the culture, and, we may add, the loyalty of the Democratic party. Besides being by far the ablest, and in many respects one of the most fair and candid of the opposition journals, it is the acknowledged organ of that part of the Democratic party which has learned something from the events of the past five years.

There is a scholarliness, a fairness, and an intellectual vivacity about its leading articles which makes them pleasant to read, even when one cannot adopt their arguments or endorse their views. It is a very fair representative of that large and influential class of our fellow-citizens who were truly loyal to the Government during the war, but who do not wish to give up the name and organization of the Democratic party. That class constitutes by no means a majority of the party, but with the Republicans it constitutes a very large majority of the whole people.—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

OF THE

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD

Running West from Omaha

ACROSS THE CONTINENT,

ARE NOW COMPLETED.

The means provided for the construction of this Great National Work are ample. The United States grants its Six Per Cent. Bonds at the rate of from $16,000 to $48,000 per mile, for which it takes a second lien as security, and receives payment to a larger if not to the full extent of its claim in services. These Bonds are issued as each twenty-mile section is finished, and after it has been examined by United States Commissioners, and pronounced to be in all respects a first-class road, thoroughly supplied with depots, repair-shops, stations, and all the necessary rolling stock and other equipments.

The United States also makes a DONATION of 12,800 acres of land to the mile, which will be a source of large revenue to the Company. Much of this land in the Platte Valley is among the most fertile in the world, and other large portions are covered with heavy pine forests and abound in coal of the best quality.

It is expected that a portion of

These Valuable Lands

will be offered to the public in the Spring of 1868, at prices that will be

A Great Inducement to Actual Settlers.

Full information on this subject may be obtained by addressing the Company, at

No. 20 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK.

The Company is also authorized to issue its own First Mortgage Bonds to an amount equal to the issue of the Government and no more. Hon. E. D. MORGAN and Hon. OAKES AMES are Trustees for the Bondholders, and deliver the Bonds to the Company only as the work progresses, so that they always represent an actual and productive value.

EARNINGS OF THE COMPANY.

At present, the profits of the Company are derived only from its local traffic, but this is already much more than sufficient to pay the interest on all the Bonds the Company can issue, if not another mile were built. It is not doubted that when the road is completed the through traffic of the only line connecting the Atlantic and Pacific States will be large beyond precedent, and, as there will be no competition, it can always be done at profitable rates.

It will be noticed that the Union Pacific Railroad is, in fact, a Government Work, built under the supervision of Government officers, and to a large extent with Government money, and that its bonds are issued under Government direction. It is believed that no similar security is so carefully guarded, and certainly no other is based upon a larger or more valuable property.

A NEW PAMPHLET AND MAP, showing the Progress of the Work, Resources for Construction, and Value of Bonds, may be obtained at the Company's Offices, or of its advertised Agents, or will be sent free on application.

JOHN J. CISCO, Treasurer, New York.

THE UNIVERSAL

Clothes Wringer

IMPROVED!

WITH ROWELL'S PATENT DOUBLE GEAR.

THE ONLY WRINGER WITH THE PATENT STOP,

Without which Cog Wheels fly out of gear, and are of No Use when Most Needed.

The proprietors of the Universal Wringer have now removed all objections, real or imaginary, to this machine, by the adoption of the two improvements, lately adopted. One for a Gear, which will play apart, so the stop can be put higher up, and more easily admit the passage of large articles between the rolls. The other for a more simple Clasp Extension. These Improvements now render the Universal Wringer, which has always been the best, so far superior to all others as to defy competition. In Fig. 2 is seen an enlarged view of the improved Double Gear. The peculiarity of this Gear consists in the fewness of the teeth, and in making the wheels double. By having fewer teeth, they can be made strong and longer, and by doubling the wheels and alternating the teeth, they come in contact as often as if twice as fine. They can be separated over half an inch from the pitch line, and propel each other as perfectly as when closely together. Another valuable feature in this Gear is in the ring between the teeth, which is so arranged that the rings will ride one upon the other, before the teeth are pressed together so as to bind, and the beveled teeth of each wheel, passing astride the rim of the opposite wheel, prevents any side motion, and keeps the upper always directly over the lower set of Gears. The Universal "EXTRA," with this Gear, and new Extension to Clasp, took the First Premium at ELEVEN STATE FAIRS in 1867.

Sold by Hardware Dealers, House Furnishing and General Stores everywhere. Large Discounts to Jobbers and the Trade. Send for Descriptive Circular and Wholesale Terms.

ESTABLISHED 1861.

The Great American TEA COMPANY

Nos. 31 & 33 VESEY STREET,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

TWO FULL CARGOES OF THE FINEST NEW CROP TEAS.

22,000 HALF CHESTS by Ship "Golden State."

12,000 HALF CHESTS by Ship "George Shotton."

In addition to these large cargoes of Black and Japan Teas, the Company are constantly receiving large invoices of the finest quality of Green Teas from the Moyune district of China, which are unrivaled for fineness and delicacy of flavor.

To give our readers an idea of the profits which have been made in the Tea trade, we will start with the American houses, leaving out of the account entirely the profits of the Chinese factors.

1st. The American house in China or Japan makes large profits on their sales or shipments, and some of the richest retired merchants in the country have made their immense fortunes through their houses in China.

2d. The Banker makes large profits upon the foreign exchange used in the purchase of Teas.

3d. The Importer makes a profit of 30 to 50 per cent. in many cases.

4th. On its arrival here it is sold by the cargo, and the Purchaser sells it to the Speculator in invoices of 1000 to 2000 packages, at an average profit of about 10 per cent.

5th. The Speculator sells it to the Wholesale Tea Dealer in lines at a profit of 10 to 15 per cent.

6th. The Wholesale Tea Dealer sells it to the Wholesale Grocer in lots to suit his trade, at a profit of about 10 per cent.

7th. The Wholesale Grocer sells it to the Retail Dealer at a profit of 15 to 25 per cent.

8th. The Retailer sells it to the consumer for ALL THE PROFIT HE CAN GET.

When you have added to these EIGHT profits as many brokerages, cartages, storages, cooperages and wastes, and add the original cost of the Tea, it will be perceived what the consumer has to pay. And now we propose to show why we can sell so very much lower than other dealers.

We propose to do away with all these various profits and brokerages, cartages, storages, cooperages and wastes, with the exception of a small commission paid for purchasing to our correspondents in China and Japan, one cartage, and a small profit to ourselves—which, on our large sales, will amply pay us.

By our system of supplying Clubs throughout the country, consumers in all parts of the United States can receive their Teas at the same price (with the small additional expense of transportation) as though they bought them at our warehouses in this city.

Some parties inquire of us how they shall proceed to get up a Club. The answer is simply this: Let each person wishing to join in a Club say how much tea or coffee he wants, and select the kind and price from our Price List, as published in the paper or in our circulars. Write the names, kinds and amounts plainly on the list as seen in the Club Order published below, and when the Club is complete send it to us by mail, and we will put up each party's goods in separate packages, and mark the name upon them, with the cost, so there need be no confusion in their distribution—each party getting exactly what he orders, and no more. The cost of transportation the members can divide equitably among themselves.

Parties sending Club or other orders for less than thirty dollars had better send Post-office Drafts or money with their orders, to save the expense of collections by express; but larger orders we will forward by express, to collect on delivery.

Hereafter we will send a complimentary package to the party getting up the Club. Our profits are small, but we will be as liberal as we can afford. We send no complimentary package for Clubs less than $30.

Parties getting their Teas of us may confidently rely upon getting them pure and fresh, as they come direct from the Custom House stores to our Warehouses.

We warrant all the goods we sell to give entire satisfaction. If they are not satisfactory they can be returned at our expense within 30 days, and have the money refunded.

The Company have selected the following kinds from their stock, which they recommend to meet the wants of clubs. They are sold at cargo prices, the same as the Company sell them in New York, as the list of prices will show.

PRICE LIST OF TEAS.

OOLONG (Black), 70c., 80c., 90c., best $1 per pound.

GROUND COFFEE, 20c., 25c., 30c., 35c., best 40c. per pound. Hotels, Saloons, Boarding-house keepers, and Families who use large quantities of Coffee, can economize in that article by using our FRENCH BREAKFAST AND DINNER COFFEE, which we sell at the low price of 30c. per pound, and warrant to give perfect satisfaction.

Consumers can save from 50c. to $1 per pound by purchasing their Teas of "The Great American Tea Company," Nos. 31 and 33 Vesey Street.

N. B.—All villages and towns where a large number reside, by Clubbing together, can reduce the cost of their Teas and Coffees about one-third, (besides Express charges,) by sending directly to "The Great American Tea Company."

BEWARE of all concerns that advertise themselves as branches of our Establishment, or copy our name either wholly or in part, as they are bogus or imitations. We have no branches, and do not, in any case, authorize the use of our name.

Post-Office Orders and Drafts, make payable to the order of "Great American Tea Company." Direct letters and orders to

Manufacturers and Dealers in Fine Tobaccos,

Genuine Maccaboy, Rappee and Extra Scotch Snuff.

We are constantly receiving the finest SUN CURED Tobaccos, from Virginia and North Carolina, embracing Henry, Bedford, Pittsylvania, Mecklinburg and Halifax Counties, Va., Caswell County, N. C., and other famous manufacturing points, to which the attention of LARGE AND CLOSE BUYERS is respectfully solicited.

We are offering them in Bond or Tax paid, at less than market prices,

We shall be glad to show them to dealers in FINE Tobaccos, as we are assured that we have the best assortment of Fine Tobaccos of any house in the city.

Fine Cut Chewing Tobaccos.

The immense popularity of our FINE CUT TOBACCOS in various sections induces us to bring them to the notice of the trade. Our Century Brand is manufactured from the very best selections of the choicest leaf that can be procured. It is finely cut, of a beautiful bright, golden color, and is free from drugs and all deleterious substances. This brand of Tobacco is put up in elegant tin foil wrappers, and we pack therein daily, the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS, in various denominations.

In addition to the CENTURY FINE CUT, we are manufacturing those well-known brands—CAVENDISH, ROSE LEAF, COMET, and BEE—all of them manufactured with extra care, to suit the requirements of every section of the country.

Snuff.

As heretofore, we continue to manufacture all our old established brands, and, in addition, pack now an article especially for South-western trade, called "EXTRA SCOTCH SNUFF," which is superior to any made. For the convenience of dealers and consumers, we put up these goods in small bottles, at a price that will commend them to the trade.

Cigars.

To this department we pay every care and attention, and can most earnestly recommend our stock to the trade. They embrace Cigars of all grades and styles, both foreign and domestic, and all brands manufactured expressly for us we guarantee as represented, and have no hesitancy in saying that they are lower in price, and in point of quality are not excelled by any responsible manufacturer in the country.

Granulated Smoking.

We have taken especial care to make this an important branch of our business. Our granulated goods are inferior to none in the country. They are all made from the very best Virginia leaf, and are put up in very attractive cloth sacks, in QUARTERS, HALVES, POUNDS and FIVE POUND SIZES.

1868. THE WORLD. 1868

At the opening of the year 1868, THE WORLD challenges, more confidently than ever, the sympathy and support of all partiotic citizens. A glorious work has been gloriously begun. Deep already answers to deep. The long fidelity of this journal to the cause of Liberty protected by Law, stands nobly vindicated in a splendor of victory shining from Maine to California. Connecticut, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New-York, have thundered forth their verdict upon the misrule and the madness of the past. But much more still remains to be done. Never was the peril of the country greater. The Radical party still decrees the death of representative self-government in ten sovereign States. Armed with military despotism and wholesale Negro Suffrage, it desperately grasps at a permanent lease of power, in defiance of public opinion, at the cost of enormous taxes and of crippled industries, at the cost of Union and Peace.

To the great battle still to be fought, THE WORLD will give all its efforts, all its energies. It asks of its friends in their turn as much; it asks of them more readers and a wider influence. It asks this with confidence in its claims as a newspaper and as an organ of opinion.

The chief use of a newspaper is to give its readers

ALL THE NEWS.

For this the facilities of THE WORLD are unsurpassed by any journal in the United States. It seeks to excel by an accuracy and candor, a spirit and freshness in its news columns which shall commend it to readers of whatever party, sex, creed or place.

As an organ of opinion, THE WORLD is the unflinching champion of whereof the corner-stone is Freedom restrained by Justice; Freedom, pure and simple, in the largest collective measure; the office of Justice being to protect Freedom from encroachments; Freedom of the individual citizen in his rights of thought, speech, religion, and locomotion; in his Right to choose his own food and drink, in spite of meddlesome temperance laws; in his Right to make any money bargains he thinks proper, in spite of foolish usury laws; in his Right to buy and sell in all markets, domestic and foreign, in spite of unjust protective tariffs; in his Right to representation in the legislative bodies which tax him, in spite of unconstitutional exclusions; Freedom of collective citizens to assemble for discussion of grievances; Freedom of all local communities to manage their local affairs without central interference; Freedom, in every section of the country, from the arrogant and unconstitutional domination of other sections. This large and comprehensive idea of Freedom sums up the politics of THE WORLD, which will never be found wanting to this capital interest of the country and of the human race.

A paper published in the metropolis is naturally looked to for careful Market Reports, authentic information, and intelligent discussions relating to

TRADE, COMMERCE AND FINANCE.

In these features THE WORLD invites comparison with any other journal.

THE WORK OF THE WORLD.

"Let the dead past bury its dead." Out of the battle and the partial defeat of 1868, the unbroken columns of the constitutional and patriotic Democracy of America march forward to new conflicts and to final victory. How are the conflicts before us most vigorously to be fought? How is the victory which awaits us most promptly and most completely to be won? These are the practical questions of the hour. And to these questions THE WORLD makes answer now. Organization is the secret of vigor in the battle-field; organization is the means, as the righteousness of our great cause is the pledge of victory. What Radicalism has done, and by doing has won its deadly victories, Democracy must do if Democracy is to triumph to the saving of the state. Not a day passes which does not bring us, in enforcement of this point, such letters as the following, by an earnest and resolute Pennsylvania Democrat:

To the Editor of THE WORLD.—"During the late campaign, the Democracy of this vicinity made a thorough fight, using as their campaign paper 'THE WORLD.' You may recollect that I, last winter, raised in this and neighboring towns a club of about one hundred subscribers to THE WEEKLY WORLD. Of this number, many were Republicans. Nearly every one of them voted the Democratic ticket at both elections this fall. We propose to continue the fight and to advance our banners. To do this we wish to raise a still larger club. I think THE WORLD made here about thirty Democratic votes. We think we can double our converts next year, and we mean to circulate here more WORLDS than Tribunes."

Here we have the true spirit of the battle and the sound assurance of victory! The work to be done by the Democracy is to make converts, and this is the work of THE WORLD. The more widely the Radicals circulate their papers the better it will be for the Democracy, if the Democracy, like our Pennsylvania friend, meet those papers at every point with THE WORLD. We do not shrink from—we invite, we entreat—the fullest discussion of the great questions before the country. The Republic is to be saved in this way, and in this way only. The thirty men whom THE WORLD last year found Radicals in Canton, and whom it this year brought up Democrats to the polls, are but types of the work which THE WORLD has been doing in PENNSYLVANIA as well as in NEW YORK, in INDIANA as well as in NEW JERSEY. To push on this good work is the first duty, because it is the most solid hope of every good Democrat within the Union. Nor is an hour to be lost in doing it. The redemption of 1872 must be achieved now, and to-morrow, and the next day, and every day, until the Nation is once more rallied to its ancient standards of Liberty Protected by Law. Converts are not to be made in an hour nor in a day. Form your clubs, friends of Liberty and of Law! Begin to-day to circulate. THE WORLD. Keep circulating it. Wherever the Radicals have gone before you, there follow them up. Wherever the bane is found there press the antidote. Do more. Go further. Be aggressive in attack as well as resolute in defence. THE WORLD, we promise you, will give you weapons. THE WORLD means battle, because THE WORLD means Victory. What we ask of you is Organization! Organization! Organization! Give THE WORLD its field, and THE WORLD will do its work!

To Ascertain the Length of the Day and Night.

At any time of the year add twelve hours to the time of the Sun's setting, and from the sum subtract the time of rising, for the length of the day. Subtract the time of setting from twelve hours, and to the remainder add the time of rising next morning, for the length of the night. These rules are equally true for apparent time.

Notes.

Mercury will be visible February 1, May 26, and September 22, in the West, soon after sunset; also March 21, July 19, and November 7, in the East, just before sunrise. Mars will be brightest February 13, Jupiter will be brightest November 8, and Saturn will be brightest June 4—all rising about sunset. Saturn's rings will be visible all the year, the visual line making an angle of little more than 26 degs. with the plane of the rings. Venus will not be very conspicuous till towards the close of the year.

Occultations.

The moon will occult or eclipse the star Regulus (a Leonis) and the star Aldebaran (a Tauri), as follows:

* Not visible at Washington, as the star will set at 1 o'clock 21m. mo., but may be seen in the Western States; as the moon sets in the Eastern States, the star may be seen very close to its eastern edge. † January 29.

Eclipse of the Moon, January 27.

In 1869 a partial eclipse of the moon January 27, and a total eclipse of the sun August 7, will be visible in the United States. In the eclipse of the moon the magnitude is $\frac{458}{1000}$ of the moon's diameter, the eclipse beginning at the northeastern part of the moon, and ending at the northwestern part. On the Sierra Nevada (owing to refraction), it would be possible to see a portion of the moon in eclipse while a portion of the sun is above the horizon. In California and Oregon the moon will rise eclipsed. The following table exhibits the time of the different phases for several places:

Eclipse of the Sun, August 7.

The eclipse of the sun in the afternoon, August 7, will be seen as partial throughout the United States, and as total throughout Iowa, Central Illinois, Southern Indiana, Kentucky, and North Carolina. The eclipse will be total at noon in Alaska, lat. 61° 46. 9′ north, long. 68° 4.6′ west of Washington. The line of central and total eclipse from thence runs southeasterly, touching the coast near Sitka; thence passes into British America, and enters the United States near the origin of Milk River, long. 30° W. From thence it passes through the southwest corner of Minnesota, crosses the Mississippi River near Burlington, Iowa, and proceeds through Illinois just north of Springfield, and crosses the Ohio River near Louisville. It then runs through Kentucky and North Carolina, passing just south of Raleigh, and entering the Atlantic near Newbern and Beaufort, N. C. North of this line the eclipse will be partial, the southern limb being eclipsed; and south of the line it will also be partial, the northern limb being eclipsed. As the sun will be nearly at its greatest distance from the earth, and the moon at its least, the obscuration will last a longer time than usual. The following table exhibits the time of the different phases at the places indicated:

It will be seen that the path of this eclipse lies through a large and densely-settled portion of the country. There have been but two eclipses, those of 1806 and 1834, since the beginning of the present century, which were visible in any considerable part of the United States. [Photographers, in the line of total or partial eclipse, who have the use of a telescope, can advance the ends of science by taking photographs of the eclipse.]

Volcanic Eruptions and Earthquakes.

The last great eruption of Vesuvius began November 14, 1867, increasing in intensity till January 28, 1868, when a portion of the mountain fell, burying several houses and destroying many lives; and the eruption did not subside till March 14. Almost simultaneously with the commencement of this eruption began the series of earthquakes in the West Indies, predicted by M. Dellisier. From November 11, to November 19, 1867, shocks were felt at St. Thomas, St. Bartholomew, Porto Rico, and St. Domingo. The shock at Santa Cruz was felt at sea. The U. S. steamer De Soto was dashed ashore, and was broken to pieces; the Monongahela was driven on the wave into the town Contra, was carried back by the return wave, and stranded on the beach. The shock, on the same day, at San Juan, Porto Rico, was very severe. The loss of life in these convulsions was small, but the destruction of property was considerable. December 18, earthquake shocks were felt in Northern New York, Vermont, and Canada. December 29, there was a severe shock at St. Johns, Porto Rico; March 7, an earthquake at Venezuela, throwing down several buildings, and destroying many lives; March 10, there were serious shocks at Porto Rico, and the same day, in the harbor of La Moule, Guadaloupe, the sea receded, leaving vessels aground, the returning wave doing great damage to shipping. There was another earthquake shock at St. Thomas, March 16, and the next day shocks occurred at intervals during twenty-four hours at Porto Rico. March 24, there was a shock at San Francisco, California. The terrible eruption of the great volcano, Mauna Loa, in the island of Hawaii, began March 27, and continued till April 15. This eruption was accompanied by continuous earthquake shocks, the earth trembling almost incessantly—more than 2,000 shocks were counted, the severest occurring April 2, throwing down nearly every building in the entire district of Kau, and destroying hundreds of lives. New craters opened; streams of lava poured down into and far out at sea; at Waiahinu a conical island was thrown up 400 feet three miles from the shore; hills were leveled; chasms opened; the courses of streams were changed; and the topography of the entire island was changed, the shore on the south-west side sinking from three to seven feet. April 16, there were serious shocks at Antigua, West Indies. May 29, heavy shocks were felt at Sacramento, California. July 23, four shocks were felt at Sidney, Australia. The series of shocks in Peru, culminating in the terrible earthquake of August 16, with its appalling destruction of life and property, began August 1. On the 13th rose the tidal wave which partly inundated Callao, the recession reaching the Sandwich Islands, appearing also on the coast of Southern California, where the tide suddenly rose sixty feet, and then receded; and the day following the tidal phenomenon was observed in Japan. August 13, a destructive tornado passed over Buenos Ayres; August 14, there was an earthquake shock in the city of Mexico; August 20, shocks were felt in different parts of India; and September 1, St. Thomas took another shaking. October 4, earthquake and tidal wave at Honolulu. October 6, three severe shocks occurred at Silver Mountain, California. October 8, shock at Hiogo, Japan. October 10, two sharp shocks were experienced at Floyd C. H., Virginia. October 13, severe earthquake at Copiapo, Chili, 38 buildings injured, and, at the same time, several volcanoes in eruption in Southern Chili. October 15, another tidal wave at Hawaii, destroying much property. October 21, there was a very severe shock at San Francisco, destroying $3,000,000 worth of property—followed by slight shocks for some days afterwards. October 26, earthquake shocks were felt in Cork County, Ireland; and on the same day there were more shocks in California. October 30, fresh eruption of Vesuvius, continuing through November. November 1, severe shocks earthquake in western counties of England and in Wales. November 3 and 6, shocks in Mexico. November 6, violent earthquake shock at Bucharest. November 15, slight shocks reported at Elizabeth, N. J., and on Staten Island. November 17, shock at Cologne, Germany. The frequency of these shocks in 1868, their extension over three-fourths of the globe, and the evident connection between the earthquakes and the volcanic eruptions, are phenomena which enlist the attention of scientific men.

The Solar Eclipse of August 18, 1868.

The results of the British, French, and German expeditions to India, to observe the great total eclipse of August 18, were not so satisfactory as were anticipated, owing to the clouds and rain. At Aden, nine-tenths of the sky was overcast; but, through a break in the clouds, Dr. Hermann Vogel, of the North German expedition, succeeded in securing three or four photographs, two of which presented the same phenomena—"the dark border of the sun was surrounded on one side by peculiar protuberances, and on the other was a remarkable horn." At Calcutta and Bombay dense clouds hid the eclipse, except for two intervals of a few seconds each, at Calcutta. At about 10.20 A.M., the time of the greatest obscuration, the sun appeared like a crescent moon, 79-hundredth parts of it being hidden. Major Tennant and Lieutenant Herschel give accounts of the photographical and spectroscopic work performed by the two principal English observing parties. Major Tennant states that at Guntoor, towards the period of totality, the sky became covered with thin cumulo-stratus clouds, which had the effect of diminishing the photographic energy of solar light to such an extent that every negative was under-exposed, and little more than dense marks were obtained indicating the place of the protuberances; and the plates showed but faint traces of the corona. Captain Branfil, belonging to the same party, superintended the polariscopic analysis of the light from the corona and the protuberances. He found the light from the corona strongly polarized everywhere in a plane passing through the centre of the sun. This shows that the corona is not self-luminous, but shines by reflecting the sun's light. On the other hand, Captain Branfil found that the light from the protuberances is not polarised; indicating that the protuberances are self-luminous. Major Tennant examined the light from both the above-named sources with the spectroscope. The light from the corona gave a continuous spectrum, as would of course be the case when solar light is reflected from any non-luminous substance. The light from the protuberances he found to give a spectrum of bright lines. He says:—"I am, I believe, safe in saying that three of the lines in the spectrum of the protuberances correspond to the lines C D, and b in the solar spectrum. I saw a line in the green near F, but I had lost so much time in finding the protuberance (owing to the finder having changed its adjustment since last night) that I lost it in the sunlight before measuring it; and I believe I saw traces of a line in the blue near G; but to see these clearly involves a very large change in the focus of the telescope, which was out of the question then." The line C in the solar spectrum is one of the lines of hydrogen, as also is the line F; the line D, or, properly speaking, the double line to which Fraunhofer assigned that letter, is characteristic of the metal sodium. The presence of these lines is proof that the protuberances consist of burning hydrogen and sodium. Major Tennant draws from his observations the conclusion that the atmosphere of the sun consists mainly of non-luminous or faintly-luminous gas, at a short distance from the body of the sun. Lieutenant Herschel undertook the analysis of the light from the protuberances and corona. Shortly after the commencement of the totality he was able to bring a solar protuberance under the analysing power of his spectroscope. "A single glance," he writes, "solved the problem in great measure. Three vivid lines—red, orange, blue! No others; no trace of a continuous spectrum." The result of his measurements was that the orange line coincided beyond question with the line D. But the blue line did not appear to coincide with the line F of hydrogen, although not differing much from it in position. The red line might have been near the line C of hydrogen. He saw no distinct indications of a spectrum belonging to the corona. "I conclude, therefore," he says, "that it was a faint solar spectrum—a conclusion in accordance with other characteristics of the phenomenon, but especially with the (flickering?) radiating appearance, and with the satisfactory determination by Lieutenant W. M. Campbell, R.E., of the conditions of polarization obtaining in the corona. These leave no doubt that the light of the corona is polarized in planes passing through the sun's centre." The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's ship Ragoon, August 18, was on its voyage to Bombay, in latitude 15 deg. 42 min. and east longitude 50 deg. 15 min., on the central line, and in the most advantageous position for witnessing the eclipse. The captain says:—"The total eclipse lasted four minutes eight seconds. In observing with the spectroscope I saw two prominences on the right limb of the moon (showing in the spectroscope to the left), of a yellow flame-color immediately opposite to the red ones, the whole forming a square, with the moon in the centre showing out like a mass of rock. The color of the corona, as seen through the prism, was red, a yellowish-green, blue, and violet; the violet the brightest till the middle of the eclipse, when the red became lumpy and showed brighter. The spectrum from the moon cut through the centre of this, but was very faint, the red thrown out with a curve. The motion of the ship was so great it was impossible to get minute observations. There was so much haze and flying cloud that only Venus and one other star could be seen." Captain D. Rennoldson made four diagrams of the eclipse, which showed:—1. A small red flame or protuberance on the right hand lower corner of the moon, visible a few seconds before the sun was totally eclipsed, disappeared a few seconds after. 2. A minute and a half after commencement of total eclipse a long red flame, of about 5 min. of arc on lower left hand corner, and a red flame or blotch on upper hand; both visible from commencement of totality, and very bright. 3. Three minutes after commencement the long red flame rather shorter and the upper one increased in size. 4. At re-appearance of the sun's upper limb the upper protuberance disappeared; the lower one was visible for about 10 seconds after, about half its former size. Captain N. Stewart, of the steamship Mongolia, which left Calcutta August 16, also observed the eclipse, and says:—"It commenced 16h. 19min. 7secs., and ended at 16h. 21min. 55secs., Greenwich mean time of 17th; making duration of total phase 2min. 48secs. The corona was very brilliant, but only one red protuberance was observed, pointing to S. E. There was considerable haze and strong wind, which made it impossible to obtain any observation of value."

DISCOVERY OF NEW PLANETS.—Professor J. C. Watson, of the Detroit Observatory, Michigan University, reported, August 15 and September 8, 1868, the discovery of two stars of the tenth magnitude. August 13, Encke's comet was observed from the Washington National Observatory, and was again visible in September. August 22, Professor Peters, of Hamilton College, reported the discovery of a star of the eleventh magnitude.

Conventions, Treaties, Messages, and Proclamations.

Nov. 12, 1867.—Postal Conventions between the United States and the Swis Confederation; with the colonial government of Hong Kong, China; and, Nov. 30, with Italy.

Dec. 3, 1867. President's Message. Calls the attention of Congress to the continued disorganization of the Union; anticipations had been disappointed by legislation from which the President felt constrained to withhold his assent; there is no Union as our fathers understood the term; the States lately in rebellion are still members of the National Union, that the executive, his predecessor, himself, the heads of the departments, have uniformly acted upon the principle that the Union is indissoluble, and Congress and the Judiciary have reaffirmed the same principle. He therefore "recommends the repeal of the Acts of Congress which place ten of the States under the domination of military masters," and repeats his objections to the acts. He discusses the question of negro suffrage; he discusses the question how far the duty of the President to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution requires him to go in opposing an unconstitutional act of Congress. He declares the so-called Reconstruction acts to be plainly unconstitutional, but thinks the remedy in the hands of the people who, in the Northern States, still have the right of ballot. He argues against the Tenure of Office bill, as taking from the power of securing fidelity in the execution of functions of subordinate officials. Considerable space is devoted to the consideration of the finances and circulating medium of the country. He urges a revision of the revenue system, so that the internal taxes should bear most heavily upon articles of luxury. In foreign affairs there are no serious disturbing questions; Great Britain would probably settle our just claims; a treaty had been concluded with Denmark, for the cession of the islands of St. Thomas and St. Johns; attention is called to the conflict of laws growing out of different views in respect of naturalization; and it is recommended that the treaty stipulations with Great Britain for maintaining a naval force to suppress the slave trade shall be discontinued, the trade having ceased.

December 12, 1867.—Message of the President in regard to the suspension of Mr. Stanton. (See Impeachment.)

May 5, 1868.—Message of the President transmitting the constitution of the States of South Carolina and Arkansas; May 11, transmitting the constitutions of North Carolina and Louisiana; May 18, transmitting the constitution of Georgia; and May 27, transmitting the constitution of Florida. [See Reconstruction.]

May 27.—Treaty between the United States and the king of Prussia, signed Feb. 22, 1868. It provides that citizens of the North German Confederation, who become naturalized citizens of the United States of America, and shall have resided uninterruptedly within the United States five years, shall be held by the North German Confederation to be American citizens, and shall be treated as such; and reciprocally with regard to citizens of the United States who become naturalized citizens of the North German Confederation. The declaration of an intention to become a citizen of the one or the other country has not for either party the effect of naturalization. If a German naturalized in America renews his residence in North Germany, without the intent to return to America, he shall be held to have renounced his naturalization in the United States. And reciprocally with regard to renewing residence in the United States. The intent not to return may be held to exist when the person naturalized in the one country resides more than two years in the other country.

July 4, 1868.—Granting a General Pardon and Amnesty to persons engaged in the late rebellion, with certain exceptions and reservations. Whereas, in the month of July, anno Domini 1861, in accepting the condition of civil war, which was brought about by insurrection and rebellion in several of the States which constitute the United States, the two Houses of Congress did solemnly declare that the war was not waged on the part of the Government in any spirit of oppression, nor for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, nor for any purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of the States, but only to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution of the United States, and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired, and that so soon as those objects should be accomplished, the war on the part of the Government should cease; And whereas the President of the United States has heretofore, in the spirit of that declaration, and with the view of securing for it ultimate and complete effect, set forth several proclamations, offering amnesty and pardon to persons who had been or were concerned in the aforenamed rebellion, which proclamations, however, were attended with prudential reservations and exceptions then deemed necessary and proper, and which proclamations were respectively issued on the eighth day of December, 1863, on the twenty-sixth day of March, 1864, on the twenty-ninth day of May, 1865, and on the seventh day of September, 1867; And whereas the said lamentable civil war has long since altogether ceased, with an acknowledgment by all the States of the supremacy of the Federal Constitution and of the Government thereunder, and there no longer exists any reasonable ground to apprehend a renewal of the said civil war, or any foreign interference, or any unlawful resistance by any portion of the people of any of the States to the Constitution and laws of the United States; And whereas it is desirable to reduce the standing army, and to bring to a speedy termination military occupation, martial law, military tribunals, abridgment of the freedom of speech and of the press, and suspension of the privilege of habeas corpus, and of the right of trial by jury—such encroachments upon our free institutions in time of peace being dangerous to public liberty, incompatible with the individual rights of the citizen, contrary to the genius and spirit of our republican form of Government, and exhaustive of the national resources; And whereas it is believed that amnesty and pardon will tend to secure a complete and universal establishment and prevalence of municipal law and order, in conformity with the Constitution of the United States, and to remove all appearances or presumptions of a retaliatory or vindictive policy on the part of the Government, attended by unnecessary disqualifications, pains, penalties, confiscations, and disfranchisements, and, on the contrary, to promote and procure complete fraternal reconciliation among the whole people, with due submission to the Constitution and laws; Now, therefore, be it known that I, ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States, do, by virtue of the Constitution and in the name of the people of the United States, hereby proclaim and declare, unconditionally and without reservation, to all and to every person who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion excepting such person or persons as may be under presentment or indictment in any court of the United States having competent jurisdiction upon a charge of treason, or rather felony, a full pardon and amnesty for the offence of treason against the United States, or of adhering to their enemies during the late civil war, with restoration of all rights of property, except as to slaves, and except also as to any property of which any person may have been legally divested under the laws of the United States. In testimony whereof I have signed these presents with my hand, and have caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed. Done at the city of Washington, the fourth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and of the [SEAL.] Independence of the United States of America the ninety-third.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

October 31, 1868.—Proclamation of a treaty with the Sacs and Foxes of the Mississippi, by which they cede to the United States all their lands, in return for which ample compensation is made, and a tract of land set aside in the Indian country south of Kansas for their future home.

November 5, 1868.—Proclamation of an extradition treaty with Italy.

November 9, 1868.—Proclamation of the ratification of a treaty between the United States and the Senecas, Shawnees, Quapaws, Peorias, Kaskaskias, Weas, Piankeshaws, Miamies, Ottawas, and certain Wyandottes. It provides that portions of those tribes shall remove from Kansas to other lands or reservations in the Indian country south of that State, while other portions will dissolve their tribal relations and become citizens. The United States will give such compensation as is perfectly satisfactory to the Indians.

The Fourteenth Amendment.

The text of the Fourteenth Constitutional Amendment is given in THE WORLD ALMANAC, for 1868, p. 22, and on pp. 28–29 is a history of this amendment in Congress, its incorporation in the Reconstruction acts, and the action of the States thereon, up to April, 1867. To that time, 21 States had ratified it; 13 States (Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, and the Southern States) had rejected it; California, Iowa, and Nebraska had not acted. Since then, California rejected it, and Iowa and Nebraska ratified it. January 13, 1868, the Legislature of Ohio withdrew the ratification of the pre-ious legislature. February 20, New Jersey withdrew its ratification, and passed the resolution of withdrawal over the veto of the Governor. In October, the Legislature of Oregon withdrew its ratification. During the last year certain Southern States which had rejected the proposed amendment ratified it, ratification having been made the condition of their representation in Congress. July 11, 1868, the President made proclamation of the ratification of this amendment by Florida and North Carolina; July 14, he sent a message to the Senate specifying the States which had ratified, and adding notices of ratification "received from newly constituted and established authorities assuming to be and acting as legislatures and governors of Arkansas, Florida, and North Carolina;" and therewith were communicated the rescinding resolutions of Ohio and New Jersey. July 17, he sent to the Senate a paper "purporting to be" the ratification of Louisiana; July 18, a paper "purporting to be" the ratification of South Carolina; and July 20, a paper "purporting to be" the ratification of Alabama. July 20, 1868, William H. Seward, Secretary of State, issued a certificate declaring the whole number of States in the United States to be thirty-seven; that twenty-three State legislatures had ratified the amendment; that it had also been ratified "by newly constituted and newly established bodies avowing themselves to be, and acting as the legislatures of Arkansas, Florida, North Carolina, Louisiana, South Carolina, and Alabama;" that these States constituted three-fourths of the whole number of States; and notwithstanding the rescinding resolutions of Ohio and New Jersey, the amendment has become valid as a part of the Constitution of the United States. July 21, Congress passed a concurrent resolution, in the Senate, without a count, in the House, yeas 126, nays 32, "That said fourteenth article is hereby declared to be a part of the Constitution of the United States." Subsequently, the State of Georgia ratified the amendment, and the President so communicated to the Senate, July 28, and the same day Secretary Seward made official declaration, in accordance with the concurrent resolution of July 21, reciting the date of ratification by each State, and declaring the amendment to be a part of the Constitution.

The Freedmen's Bureau.

March 10, 1868, the Committee on Freedmen's Affairs submitted a report to the House recommending the continuance of the Freedmen's Bureau another year, unless the States should be represented in Congress, and it should "be found safe to suspend its action." The report of the fund from January 1, 1865, to December 31, 1867, was as follows:

APPROPRIATIONS.

From July 1, 1866, to July 1, 1867	$6,944,450 00
From July 1, 1867, to July 1, 1868	3,836,300 00
Receipts from other sources	1,605,694 19
Total receipts	$12,386,444 19

EXPENDITURES.

From the appropriations to January 1, 1868	$4,397,854 39
From the other funds	1,544,092 80
Total expenditures	$5,941,947 19

Of the appropriations $500,000 was expended for the relief of destitute people in the South, and $50,000 were transferred to the Agricultural Department for seeds for the South. January 1, 1868, the Bureau had the following balances in hand:

Balance refugee's and freedmen's fund	$61,601 39
" appropriation fund	6,382,895 61
" retained, bounty fund	35,107 48
" school fund	7,118 71
" pay, bounty, and prize money fund	585,201 86
Total balance on hand January 1, 1868	$7,071,925 01

With this money in hand the Bureau asked no appropriations for the year 1868. March 19, 1868, the House—yeas 97, nays 38—passed the following bill to continue the Bureau:

Be it enacted, &c., That the act entitled "An act to establish a Bureau for the relief of Freedmen and Refugees," approved March 3, 1865; and the act entitled "An act to continue in force and to amend 'An act to establish a Bureau for the relief of Freedmen and Refugees,' and for other purposes," passed July 16, 1866, shall continue in force for the term of one year from and after July 16, 1868, excepting so far as the same shall herein be modified. And the Secretary of War is hereby directed to re-establish said bureau where the same has been wholly or in part discontinued: Provided he shall be satisfied that the personal safety of freedmen shall require it.

SECTION 2. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to discontinue the operations of the bureau in any State whenever such State shall be fully restored in its constitutional relations with the government of the United States, and shall be duly represented in the Congress of the Unted States, unless, upon advising with the Commissioner of the bureau, and upon full consideration of the condition of freedmen's affairs in such State, the Secretary of War shall be of opinion that the further continuance of the bureau shall be necessary. Provided, however, That the educational division of said bureau shall not be affected, or in any way interfered with, until such State shall have made suitable provision for the education of the children of freedmen within said State.

SECTION 3. That unexpended balances in the hands of the Commissioner, not required otherwise for the due execution of the law, may be, in the discretion of the Commissioner, applied for the education of freedmen and refugees, subject to the provisions of laws applicable thereto.

SECTION 4. That officers of the Veteran Reserve Corps or the volunteer service, now on duty in the Freedmen's Bureau as assistant commissioners, agents, medical officers, or in other capacities, who have been or may be mustered out of service, may be retained by the Commissioner, when the same shall be required for the proper execution of the laws, as officers of the bureau, upon such duty and with the same pay, compensation, and all allowances, from the date of their appointment as now provided by law for their respective grades and duties at the dates of their muster-out and discharge; and such officers so retained shall have, respectively, the same authority and jurisdiction as now conferred upon "officers of the bureau" by act of Congress passed July 16, 1866.

SECTION 5. That the Commissioner is hereby empowered to sell for cash, or by instalments with ample security, school buildings and other buildings constructed for refugees and freedmen by the bureau, to the associations, corporate bodies, or trustees who now use them for purposes of education or relief of want, under suitable guarantees that the purposes for which such buildings were constructed shall be observed: Provided, That all funds derived therefrom shall be returned to the bureau appropriation and accounted for to the Treasury of the United States.

The Senate, without division, passed this bill June 11, 1868. The President received it June 24, but did not return it, and it became a law at the expiration of ten days without his approval. But as soon as the bill became a law, the Senate, July 11, and House, July 13, passed the following bill discontinuing the Bureau after January 1, 1869:

Be it enacted, &c., That the duties and powers of the Commissioners of the Bureau for the relief of freedmen and refugees shall continue to be discharged by the present Commissioner of the Bureau, and in case of vacancy in said office occurring by reason of his death or resignation, the same shall be filled by appointment of the President on the nomination of the Secretary of War, and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and no officer of the army shall be detailed for service as Commissioner or shall enter upon the duties of Commissioner unless appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and all assistant commissioners, agents, clerks, and assistants, shall be appointed by the Secretary of War on the nomination of the Commissioner of the Bureau. In case of vacancy in the office of Commissioner happening during the recess of the Senate, the duties of Commissioner shall be discharged by the acting Assistant Adjutant-General of the Bureau until such vacancy can be filled.

SECTION 2. That the Commissioner of the Bureau shall, on the first day of January next, cause the said Bureau to be withdrawn from the several States within which said Bureau has acted, and its operations shall be discontinued. But the educational department of the said Bureau and the collection and payment of moneys due the soldiers, sailors, and marines, or their heirs, shall be continued as now provided by law until otherwise ordered by act of Congress.

June 25 the President vetoed the bill, and the Senate 42 to 5, and the House, 115 to 23 repassed the bill over the veto. The report of General O. O. Howard, Commissioner of the Bureau, for the year ending October 20, 1868, has been submitted to the Secretary of War, but not (in November) made public. An abstract, however, states that a total expenditure from January 1, 1868, to October 20, of $3,977,041, which would leave $3,094,884.05 of the balance in hand in January 1, 1868, to cover the expenses of the Bureau to the date of its discontinuance, January 1, 1869.

Alaska.

Public act No. 99, approved July 27, 1868, appropriated $7,200,000 for the Alaska territory. Public Act No. 125, approved July 27, 1868, extends the laws of the United States relating to customs, commerce, and navigation over the ceded territory, establishes a collection district therein, and gives the District Courts of California, Oregon, and Washington jurisdiction of certain cases in Alaska, with an appropriation of $50,000 to carry out the provisions of the act, and to collect revenue from customs in the territory.

[NOTE.—The territory acquired by this treaty with Russia includes the cluster and range of the Aleutian Islands, extending from the peninsula of Alaska into the North Pacific Ocean, in a southwesterly direction, for more than thirty degrees of longitude. The northwestern boundary of the United States, established by this treaty, begins at a point between the Diomede Islands nearly in the middle of Behring's Straits, about one degree south of the Arctic Circle in latitude 66°, it reaches from thence on the meridional line of 168° 50, W. towards the North Pole; thence south to the shore of the Arctic Ocean, at about longitude 143° west, and latitude 69° 30'. From the Diomede Islands in a southwesterly direction it extends to latitude 50° in longitude about 168° east, or about thirty degrees of longitude further to the west than the Sandwich Islands.]

The Purchase of St. Thomas Treaty.

The Senate adjourned in July without acting upon the treaty ratified by Denmark for the cession to the United States of the Island of St. Thomas. The limitation for the ratification having expired, the President in September proposed to the Danish Government that the period for the ratification by the United States should be extended one year, in order that the Senate might act upon the treaty. The cable telegram relative to the postponement of the cession is by the State Department understood to mean that Denmark has accepted the President's proposition.

IMPEACHMENT.

The effort to impeach President Johnson began in the House of Representatives, December 17, 1866, when James M. Ashley, of Ohio, moved the appointment of a committee to inquire whether "any acts have been done by any officer of the Government of the United States, which, in contemplation of the Constitution, are high crimes or misdemeanors, and whether said acts were designed or calculated to overthrow, subvert, or corrupt the Government of the United States, or any department thereof." The resolution received 90 yeas and 49 nays, and as two-thirds were necessary for its adoption, was lost. January 7, 1867, Benjamin F. Loan offered a resolution of impeachment, demanding the removal of the President on conviction of "the high crimes and misdemeanors of which he is manifestly and notoriously guilty." This resolution was referred to the Reconstruction Committee. The same day, Mr. Kelso offered a resolution, in nearly the same words, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee. On the same day James M. Ashley revived his resolution of December 17, 1866, which was agreed to—yeas, 108; nays 39, and was referred to the Judiciary Committee. February 28, 1867, this committee reported, regretting its inability definitely to dispose of the subject committed to its charge, and "notifying the succeeding Congress of the incompleteness of its labors, and that they should be completed." March 7, James M. Ashley moved a continuance of this investigation by the Fortieth Congress; and March 29, Sidney Clarke moved that the Judiciary Committee should report on the first day of the meeting of the House after the recess, which was adopted, 54 to 32. Meanwhile the Committee began to take testimony February 6, 1867, and continued to do so for several months. No report was made at the July Session, as was expected, and as Clarke's resolution, adopted March 29, required. But, November 25, Mr. Boutwell, from the Committee, submitted a voluminous report comprising 1,163 printed pages of testimony, and closing with the resolution "That Andrew Johnson be impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors." Two minority reports were presented by Mr. Wilson, for himself and Mr. Woodbridge, and by Mr. Marshal, for himself and Mr. Eldridge. It may be mentioned, incidentally, that after the meeting of the Fortieth Congress it was ascertained that a majority of the Committee was opposed to further steps toward impeachment. In all the evidence taken there was nothing constituting a high crime and misdemeanor. It was understood before the recess that the Committee stood as follows: Against impeachment—Messrs. Wilson, republican, of Iowa, chairman; Woodbridge, republican, of Vermont; Churchill, republican, of New York; Marshall, democrat, of Illinois, and Eldridge, democrat, of Wisconsin—5. For impeachment—Messrs. Boutwell, republican of Massachusetts; Williams, republican, of Pennsylvania; Thomas, republican, of Maryland, and Lawrence, republican, of Ohio—4. Before the meeting of Congress in the Fall it was understood that John C. Churchill, of New York, had changed his mind, and was in favor of impeachment. It is certain that Messrs. Boutwell, Williams, Thomas, Lawrence and Churchill were the majority presenting the report of November 25 calling for impeachment. This report laid over till December 6, when the House took it up. Calls of the House and motions to adjourn put off the vote till the following day, when the resolution to impeach was lost—yeas 57 (all republicans;) nays, 108; absent or not voting, 22. Of those voting against the resolutions 69 were republicans The failure of this effort is generally attributed to the heavy republican losses in some States, and the decisive majorities in other States against the republican party in the Fall elections.

The second attempt at impeachment was as follows: January 27, 1868, Mr. Spalding moved that the Reconstruction Committee be authorized to inquire what combinations have been made or attempted to obstruct the due execution of the laws—which was carried, 99 to 31. February 10, Thaddeus Stevens moved the reference of the impeachment testimony taken by the Judiciary Committee to the Reconstruction Committee, and the day following the correspondence between President Johnson and General Grant relative to the retirement of the latter from the War Department was referred to the same committee. February 13, in a meeting of this committee, Thaddeus Stevens offered a resolution of impeachment which was promptly tabled by the following vote: Yeas, Messrs. Beaman, Bingham, Hurlburd and Paine, republicans, and Messrs. Beck and Brooks, democrats, 6; nays, Messrs. Boutwell, Farnsworth, and Thaddeus Stevens, republicans, 3. This completed the second failure.

The third and successful effort was based upon the President's ejection of Edwin M. Stanton from the War Office. The following is a concise history of the case from the beginning:

The War Department Difficulty.

During the recess of Congress the President, August 5, 1867, addressed a note to Mr. Stanton advising him that his resignation as Secretary of War would be accepted. The same day Secretary Stanton replied that considerations of a high character constrained him not to resign his office before the next meeting of Congress. August 12, the President suspended Mr. Stanton from office, and empowered General Grant to act as Secretary of War ad interim. General Grant immediately enclosed a copy of this order to

Mr. Stanton, and notified him of his acceptance of the office. Mr. Stanton replied to the President's order of suspension, denying the right to suspend, and adding: "But inasmuch as the General commanding the armies of the United States has been appointed ad interim, and has notified me that he has accepted the appointment, I have no alternative but to submit, under protest, to superior force." To General Grant he wrote in nearly the same words: "I have no alternative but to submit, under protest, to the superior force of the President." After the meeting of Congress the President sent a message to the Senate announcing his reasons for suspending Stanton. January 13, 1868, the Senate resolved, 35 to 6, not to concur in the suspension. This action of the Senate was officially communicated to General Grant, who thereupon, January 14, informed the President that his functions as Secretary of of War ad interim ceased from the moment of the receipt of the Senate notice, and Mr. Stanton at once resumed the duties of the office. In answer to a resolution of the House, February 3, the day following Mr. Stanton transmitted copies of the correspondence between General Grant and the President relating to the Secretary of War, stating at the same time that he had had no communication with the President since August 12; that since his resumption of the War Office he had discharged its duties without any communication with the President; that no orders had been issued from the department in the name of the President, and that he had received no orders from him. The following is the substance of the transmitted correspondence:

Correspondence between General Grant and President Johnson.

General Grant, January 24, 1868, asks the President to give him, in writing, the order given verbally, January 19, to disregard the orders from E. M. Stanton, as Secretary of war, until he knows from the President himself that they were his orders. On the 28th instant, he again addressed the President renewing the request for written instructions, which he says he was compelled to ask in consequence of the many and gross misrepresentations affecting his personal honor, circulated through the press in the last fortnight. In this letter he says, that some time after he assumed the duties of Secretary of War ad interim, the President asked his views as to the course Mr. Stanton would have to pursue, in case the Senate should not concur in his suspension, to obtain possession of his office. "My reply was, in substance, that Mr. Stanton would have to appeal to the courts to reinstate him." He says, citing the case of the Baltimore police commissioners: "I contended that no resource was left but to appeal to the courts." He further informed the President that if he should change his mind in this particular case, he would inform him of the fact. A subsequent examination of the Tenure of Office act convinced him that he could not refuse to vacate the office, the moment Stanton was reinstated by the Senate; that on the 11th inst., when the Senate took up the subject, he went to the President and communicated his decision; that the President did not accept his view, contending that he had appointed Grant under the authority of the Constitution; while Grant insisted that the law, constitutional or not, was binding upon him, until set aside by the proper tribunal. An hour was consumed in the discussion, and the President said he would see Grant again. Grant says, he did not agree to call on the President on Monday, or at any other definite time, and he was not sent for till Tuesday. From the 11th to the 14th, he supposed the President understood his position; he sincerely hoped that the President would nominate Gov. Cox, of Ohio, to the Secretaryship, and General Sherman, at Grant's particular request, went to see the President to urge this nomination on the 13th. On Tuesday, when Mr. Stanton resumed the office, General Comstock, who carried Grant's notice of abdication to the President, brought back a message that the President wanted to see him at the cabinet meeting, and that at this meeting the President gave "a version" of the conversation alluded to, declaring (in Grant's presence) that Grant "had agreed to hold on to the office until displaced by the courts, or resign." General Grant in nowise admitted the correctness of the President's statement of the conversations, and emphatically says he made no promise to resign if he did not resist the reinstatement. January 29, 1868, the President indorsed General Grant's note of January 24, with the requested order in writing, the receipt of which Grant acknowledged next day, adding that he was informed that the Secretary of War had received no orders limiting or impairing his authority to issue orders to the army, and that till this authority was countermanded, it would be satisfactory evidence to Grant that any orders issued from the War Department, by direction of the President, are authorized by the Executive.

January 31, the President replied to General Grant's letter of the 24th. The President says that there was a distinct understanding between himself and Grant, that if Grant should conclude that it would be his duty to surrender the office to Mr. Stanton, he would return the office to the President, prior to a decision of the Senate, in order that the President might designate some one to succeed Grant; that other conversations, directed to the same object left the same impression on the President's mind. That it was particularly so understood on the 11th inst.; that there was to be a further conference on Monday, and that Grant failed to fulfil the engagement, and thus "in disregard of the understanding" vacated the office without informing the President of his intention. The President says that, could he have anticipated this course, he would have asked Grant's resignation, or have superseded him by a successor. Had Grant acted in conformity with the understanding, the embarrassment would not have attained its present proportions. The President considered Grant's voluntary offer on the 15th inst., and on the Sunday following, to call upon Stanton, and urge upon him that the good of the service required his resignation, as a sort of reparation for the failure on Grant's part to act in accordance with an understanding more than once repeated. In reference to the cabinet meeting of the 14th, at which General Grant was present, and to which Grant refers in his letter, the President says: "My recollection of what then transpired is diametrically the reverse of your narration," and that in the presence of his cabinet, he asked General Grant: 1. If he did not agree to return the office in time to enable the President to anticipate the action of the Senate; which Grant admitted. 2. If, in the conversations of the preceding Saturday, and in answer to the request to state what he intended to do, Grant had not referred to former conversations, and stated that his actions would be consistent with the understandings which had been reached; to which Grant replied in the affirmative. 3. If it was not then understood that there was to be another conference on Monday, before final action of the Senate in Stanton's case; to which Grant replied that there was such an understanding, but he did not think the Senate would act so soon, and on Monday he was engaged with General Sherman, and occupied with "many little matters." The President further informs Grant that he had read his own narration of what occured on the 14th inst., to the members of the Cabinet who were then present, and "they, without exception, agree to its accuracy."

To this letter General Grant replied, Feb. 3, 1868, expressing his surprise that the cabinet officers should so greatly misapprehend the facts in the matter of admissions alleged to have been made by him at the cabinet meeting. He says that he did not promise to hold on to the office, or to surrender it, or to see the President again on the subject. The course the President would have it understood he had agreed to pursue was in violation of law; while the course he did pursue was in accordance with law. He then angrily assured the President that he regarded the whole matter, from the beginning to the end, as an attempt to involve him in the resistance of law, for which the President hesitated to assume the responsibility in orders, and thus to destroy his character before the country.

In reply, February 10, 1868, the President thinks that "when a controversy upon matters of fact reaches the point to which this has been brought, further assertion or denial between the immediate parties should cease." He accordingly encloses copies of letters written by Gideon Welles, Hugh McCulloch, Alex. W. Randall, O. H. Browning, and William H. Seward, members of the Cabinet, who heard the conversation in dispute. They all say that President Johnson's version is correct. The President adds, "I leave the proof without a word of comment." This letter virtually closed the correspondence, General Grant replying, February 11, that without admitting anything in the statements of these Cabinet officers, he proposed to notice only the portion of the President's letter charging him with insubordination in not obeying the direct orders of the President, and in obeying an indirect order, i. e., one purporting to be given by his direction "if it comes from the War Department." General Grant disclaimed any intention to disobey any legal order of the President, distinctly communicated and enclosed copies of the orders already received from Stanton—one directing General Grant, at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury to Stanton, to furnish an escort to public treasure from the Rio Grande to New Orleans, and two letters showing recognition of Stanton as Secretary of War by the Secretary of the Treasnry and the Postmaster General, in which cases Stanton had called upon him to make the orders requested, or to give the information desired.

Removal of Stanton.

The President, February 21, 1868, sent a message to the Senate stating that he had this day removed Mr. Stanton from the office, and designated Adjutant-General Lorenzo Thomas as Secretary of War ad interim. Mr. Edmunds submitted a resolution that the Senate disapprove of the action of the President. This resolution was amended by Mr. Wilson to read that "under the Constitution and Laws of the United States the President has no power to remove the Secretary of War and designate any other officer to perform the duties of that office ad interim," which was agreed to, yeas 28, nays 6; not voting, 20. On the same day Speaker Colfax laid before the House a communication from Mr. Stanton, enclosing a copy of the President's order to him to vacate, which was referred to the Reconstruction Committee, together with a resolution of Mr. Covode, "That Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors." On the 24th the President sent a message to the Senate, arguing that not only under the Constitution, but under the laws as now existing, he had the right to remove Stanton and appoint another to the place. Meanwhile, Stanton refused to yield to Thomas, and entered a formal complaint before the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, charging that Thomas had illegally exercised and attempted to exercise the duties of Secretary of War. Whereupon Thomas was arrested and held to bail in $15,000, to appear on the 24th; when he appeared, and was discharged from custody and bail, in order (it was not concealed) to prevent the matter from reaching, and the unconstitutionality of the Tenure of Office Act from being affirmed by, the United States Supreme Court. Thomas then entered an action against Stanton for false imprisonment, laying his damages at $150,000. For a while there were virtually two Secretaries of War: Thomas, recognized by the President and attending Cabinet meetings, and Stanton discharging the duties of the office.

The Final Effort at Impeachment.

Thaddeus Stevens, from the Reconstruction Committee, February 22, 1868, reported that, "in addition to the papers referred to the Committee, the Committee find that the President, Feb. 21, 1868, issued a commission or letter of authority to one Lorenzo Thomas, directing and authorizing said Thomas to act as Secretary of War ad interim, and to take possession of the books, records and papers and other public property in the Department" (the text of the order given): and, "upon the evidence collected by the Committee, which is herewith presented, and in virtue of the powers with which they have been invested by the House, they are of the opinion that Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors. They, therefore, recommend to the House the adoption of the accompanying resolution: Resolved, that Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors in office." This resolution came before the House February 24, and was adopted, yeas 128, nays 47; not voting, 15. A committee of seven was appointed to prepare articles of impeachment, viz.: Messrs. Boutwell, Stevens, Bingham, James F. Wilson, Logan, Julian, and Ward. Messrs. Stevens and Bingham were appointed to notify the Senate, which they did February 25. The articles were presented in the House March 2, and were in substance as follows: 1. That the order to remove Stanton was with intent to violate the Tenure of Office act. 2. That the appointment of Thomas was with the intent to violate the Constitution and the Tenure of Office act. 3. That appointing Thomas without the advice and consent of the Senate was a high misdemeanor. 4. That he conspired with Thomas to prevent Stanton from holding the office of Secretary of War. 5. That he conspired with Thomas and other persons to prevent and hinder the execution of the Tenure of Office act. 6. That he conspired with Thomas to seize the property of the United States in the War Department by force, contrary to the act to punish conspiracies, and with intent to violate the Tenure of Office act. 7. That he did the same thing with intent to violate the Tenure of Office act. 8. That he intended unlawfully to control the disbursement of moneys appropriated for the War Department, by the appointment of Thomas in violation of the Tenure of Office act. 9. That the President had endeavored to induce General Emory to violate the act of March 2, 1867, providing that all orders and instructions from the President or Secretary of War shall be issued through the General of the army; all of which charges were pronounced to be high crimes or high misdemeanors. To these, March 3, two more articles were added—10. That the President had on divers days uttered "with a loud voice certain intemperate, inflammatory and scandalous harangues, and did therein utter loud threats as well against Congress as the laws of the United States enacted thereby, amid the cries, jeers and laughter of the multitudes then assembled," as set forth in three specifications giving quotations from speeches made by the President in August and September, 1866, at Washington, Cleveland, and St. Louis; and article 11: That the President declared in a speech at Washington, August 18, 1866, that Congress was not a Congress of the United States authorized by the Constitution to exercise legislative power, but was a Congress only of part of the States; that, February 21, 1868, he attempted to prevent the execution of the Tenure of Office act, and that he further attempted to prevent the execution of the army appropriation act of March 2, 1867, and the Reconstruction act of March 2, 1867, whereby he was guilty of high misdemeanor in office. These articles were voted upon, in order, March 2 and 3, and were adopted by a strict party vote, and an average vote of 125 ayes to 40 nays. Then came the election of managers, the Democratic members abstaining from voting. These 45 members also signed and entered as Representatives "directly or in principle of more than one-half of the people of the United States," a formal protest against the entire proceedings. Messrs. John A. Bingham, George S. Boutwell, James F. Wilson, Benjamin F. Butler, Thomas Williams, John A. Logan, and Thaddeus Stevens were elected managers to conduct the impeachment. March 4, the articles were read by the managers to the Senate. March 5, Chief-Justice Chase took the chair, Associate-Justice Nelson, administering the oath requiring the Chief-Justice to do impartial justice, according to the Constitution and the laws; and the Chief-Justice subsequently administered the same oath to the Senators. March 6, an order was adopted directing a summons on Andrew Johnson, to file answer to the articles, returnable March 13. On that day the President entered appearance by his counsel, Henry Stanbery, Benjamin R. Curtis, Jeremiah S. Black, (who did not appear in the trial, William S. Groesbeck, appearing, March 23, in his stead,) William M. Evarts, and Thomas A. R. Nelson. The President asked forty days for the preparation of his answer to the articles, and the counsel read a professional statement in support of the request. The Senate ordered that the respondent file answer on or before the 23d inst., and another order was adopted, yeas 40, nays 10, that the trial should proceed immediately after the filing of the replication.

March 23, Senator Davis, of Kentucky, moved that the court make order that the Court of Impeachment cannot be constitutionally formed, while the Senators from several States are excluded, which was rejected, yeas 2 (Davis and McCreery), nays 49. Mr. Curtis then read President Johnson's answer relative to the first article; Mr. Stanbery read the portion of the answer beginning with the reply to the second article to the close of the reply to the ninth article, and Mr. Evarts read the rest of the answer. In answer to the first article the President states his reasons for removing Mr. Stanton, and his Constitutional power to do so, and denies that the matter in the article constitutes a high misdemeanor. In answer to article second, he admits the appointment of Thomas, but insists that there was a vacancy in the War Office; that it was lawful to appoint Thomas to act as Secretary ad interim; and that if the Tenure of Office act was a valid law, no provision of that act was violated in the appointment. In answer to article third, he abides by his answer to the first and second articles, and denies the allegation that he gave Thomas any other authority than the authority set forth in the article. In answer to the fourth article, he denies that he conspired with Thomas and other persons unlawfully, to hinder or prevent Stanton from holding the office of Secretary of War; that his sole purpose was to bring the question of the right of Stanton to the test of a decision by the Supreme Court; and that he gave Thomas no instructions to use intimidation or threats to enforce obedience to his orders. The President excepts to the sufficiency of the fifth article, that it was not alleged by what means the alleged conspiracy was formed or agreed to be carried out. He denies the sixth article, and and refers to his former answers. He denies the seventh article, and prays the same benefit from his former answers. To the ninth article, he denies that he ordered, or offered any inducement to General Emory to violate any law. In answer to the tenth article, he denies that the specifications correctly or justly represent his speeches; he denies that he ever designed to set aside the rightful authority of Congress; he claims the right and privilege to express his opinions to Congress and to the people on public issues; and that in so doing, he has done nothing unbecoming the Chief Magistrate of the United States. He denies the allegations in the eleventh article, and reserves leave to amend and add to his answer. The President's counsel then asked for thirty days for preparation before the trial shall proceed; which was denied, yeas 12, nays 41. The following day the managers presented the replication (adopted by the House, 116 to 36) which, reserving all advantage of exception to the insufficiency of the answer, declared that the President is guilty of the high crimes and misdemeanors mentioned in the articles, and that the House was ready to prove the same. The Senate then adopted an order to begin the trial, March 30. On that day, Butler made the opening argument, and some testimony was introduced. The day following, and April 1, 2, 3, and 4, the testimony for the managers continued, and they substantially closed their case. The testimony showed nothing more than that the President meant to test the constitutionality of the Tenure of Office law, and the alleged conspiracy between him and Thomas was not proven. April 9 and 10 was occupied in the delivery of Judge Curtis's opening argument for the defence, and April 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, with testimony. The arguments began April 22, with Mr. Boutwell, for the prosecution, followed by Mr. Nelson, for the President. Mr. Groesbeck followed on the same side; then Mr. Stevens, for the prosecution, followed by manager Williams. Mr. Evarts followed, and Mr. Stanberry closed the case for the defence; Mr. Bingham then closed for the managers. These arguments, beginning April 22, were continued April 23, 24, 25, 27, 28, 29, 30, May 1, 2, 4, 5, and were concluded May 6. May 7 and 11 were spent in determining rules, etc., and on the 12th, the illness of Senator Howard was the excuse for adjourning to May 16.

The Verdict.

May 16, the Court, by a vote of 34 to 19 ordered that the question on the eleventh article be taken first. The vote was 35 guilty, and 19 not guilty, as follows:

Guilty—Messrs. Anthony, Cameron, Cattell, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Conness, Corbett, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Harlan, Howard, Howe, Morgan, Morrill of Maine; Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Nye, Patterson, of New Hampshire, Pomeroy, Ramsey, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Tipton, Wade, Willey, Williams, Wilson, Yates; all Republicans—35.

Not Guilty—Messrs. Bayard, Buckalew, Davis, Dixon, Doolittle, Hendricks, Johnson, McCreery, Norton, Patterson of Tennessee, Saulsbury, and Vickers, Democrats, and Messrs. Fessenden, Fowler, Grimes, Henderson, Ross, Trumbull, and Van Winkle, Republicans—19.

The two-thirds vote was wanting, and the Court, after sitting three months and one day, adjourned to May 26. This verdict was received with great rejoicing by Democrats and Conservatives throughout the country. Cannon were fired, and congratulations were exchanged. A cable telegram, May 18, announced an advance in American securities in London and on the Continent. Meanwhile the most extraordinary influences were brought to bear on the seven Republican and "recreant" Senators, who were denounced by the Radical press as "traitors," while the House pretended to investigate the "corrupt means" used to influence these Senators to vote in accordance with their oath and against their party. On the 26th instant the second and third articles were voted upon, with the same result as on the eleventh article—guilty, 35; not guilty, 19. A motion to adjourn was then carried—yeas 34, nays 16. The Chief-Justice entered judgment of acquittal on the three articles voted upon, and the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment for the trial of President Johnson was adjourned sine die. On the same day Stanton addressed a communication to the President announcing that, having this day failed to be supported by two-thirds of the Senators voting on the articles of Impeachment, he had relinquished charge of the War Department, and left the same in care of Assistant Adjutant-General Townsend. May 29 the Senate took up the nomination of General John M. Schofield (nominated by the President April 23), and consented to the appointment, yeas 35, nays 2; not voting, 17.

RECONSTRUCTION.

General Grant's Report.

The history of Reconstruction is continued from THE WORLD ALMANAC for 1868. General Grant's report as General of the Army and as Secretary of War ad interim, accompanied the President's message to Congress December 3, 1867. In this report General Grant refers to the progress of Reconstruction as follows: The ten unrepresented Southern States are divided into five military districts under commanders whose powers are both civil and military. In their military duties these commanders are subordinate to the General of the army and the Secretary of War; "in their civil capacity they are entirely independent of both the General and the Secretary, except in matters of removal, appointment, and detail, where the General has the same powers as the district commanders." He "was pleased to say that the commanders of the districts have executed their difficult trust faithfully and without bias from any judgment of their own as to the merit or demerit of the law they were executing." In the First Military District, (Virginia) Brevet Major-General J. M. Schofield commanding, "the civil government was interfered with only when necessary." It was intended to admit blacks on juries, but the matter was left to the Convention. Commissioners were appointed from officers of the army and the Freedmen's Bureau, with powers of justices of the peace, while the State was divided into sub-districts, under commanders whose powers were ultimately increased to those of circuit judges. Since the act of March 23, 1867, all elections have been suspended. Existing officers were continued, the district commanders filling vacancies. The number of removals had been five, and the appointments had been one hundred and five. The commander selected registering officers, who registered September 15, 1867, 115,068 whites, 101,382 blacks, and rejected 1,629 whites and 232 blacks. Compared with the tax-list of 1866-7, this showed that 19,000 whites were disfranchised, or failed to register, and that 15,000 more blacks registered than were on the tax-list. In the Second District, (North Carolina and South Carolina) Brevet Major-General E. R. S. Canby commanding, a bureau of civil affairs was established to take charge of registration, "and its duties were afterwards extended to include all questions of protection to persons or property arising under the laws of Congress." In North Carolina there were registered 103,060 whites, and 71,657 blacks; and in South Carolina, 45,751 whites, and 79,585 blacks. Of the appropriations made by Congress $54,802.87 had been expended, and outstanding liabilities would exceed $94,802.87. "The present condition of the district," adds the General, "is so satisfactory as to warrant the belief that after elections the number of military posts in both States can be diminished." In the Third District, (Georgia, Florida, and Alabama) Brevet-Major-General John Pope, on taking command, continued State officials in office, forbidding their opposing the Reconstruction acts, prohibiting elections except under those acts, and giving notice that all vacancies in civil offices would be filled by the district commander. He issued an order forbidding official patronage to newspapers opposing the reconstruction acts; and another order holding city and county officers responsible for the preservation of peace at all public meetings, requiring troops to assist when called on. Under the laws of the State no colored person could be admitted to the jury-box, and an order was issued directing the drawing of juries indiscriminately from the list of registered voters. The State Treasurers of Georgia, Alabama, and Florida were directed to make no payments after the expiration of the fiscal year, save on warrants approved by the district commander. The boards of registration were citizens, two white and one black in each ward, and twenty-six cents per name was paid for registration. There were registered, in Georgia, 95,214 whites, and 93,457 blacks; in Alabama, 74,450 whites, and 90,350 blacks; in Florida, 11,180 whites, and 15,359 blacks; $162,325 were expended for registration. In the Fourth District (Mississippi and Arkansas) Brevet Major-General E. O. C. Ord commanding, the civil laws had not been interfered with, but military commissions were organized for the trial of "freedmen's cases, cases of horse-stealing, and violations of acts of Congress." It was difficult to find competent men who could qualify to fill vacancies in civil offices, some of which are consequently vacant. "General Ord is convinced that a larger force than is now stationed in those States to preserve order and organize conventions, will be required hereafter to protect them and secure the use of the suffrage." In the Fifth District Brevet Major-General Mower was commanding in place of General Sheridan, pending the arrival of General Hancock, and no report had been received.

Reconstruction in Congress.

December 18, 1867, the House passed a bill (104 to 37) modifying the fifth section of the act of March 23, 1867, and making a majority of the votes cast sufficient to ratify a constitution, and authorizing elections for Congress. It was substantially the same bill which became a law March 11, 1868. January 21, 1868, the Reconstruction Committee, under instructions from the House, reported a bill declaring that in the ten Southern States there were no civil State governments republican in form; and that the civil governments in said States shall not be recognized." The General of the army was required to enjoin upon district commanders the performance of all acts authorized by the reconstruction acts, and authorized to remove from command any and all of said commanders, and to detail other army officers; to remove any and all civil officers acting under the provisional governments, and appoint others; the bill repeals the law authorizing the President to detail the district commanders and to remove officers, and makes it unlawful for the President to order any part of the army or navy to assist the provisional governments to oppose the reconstruction acts, or this supplementary act, under penalty of fine and imprisonment. The bill was passed by a party vote of 124 to 45. Mr. Butler offered a substitute, authorizing the Constitutional Conventions, after submitting constitutions to the people for ratification, to appoint all civil officers; district commanders must confirm such officers, and such governments were to continue till the States were represented in Congress, and State officers had been elected and qualified under the constitutions. This was disagreed to—yeas 53, nays 112—nor was the bill taken up in the Senate. The bill finally adopted was the following:

Third Supplemental Reconstruction Act.

Be it enacted," &c., That hereafter any election authorized by the act passed March 23, 1867, entitled "An act supplementary to 'An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States,' passed March 2, 1867, and to facilitate their restoration," shall be decided by a majority of the votes actually cast; and at the election in which the question of the adoption or rejection of any constitution is submitted, any person duly registered in the State may vote in the election district where he offers to vote when he has resided therein for ten days next preceding such election, upon presentation of his certificate of registration, his affidavit, or other satisfactory evidence, under such regulations as the district commanders may prescribe.

SEC. 2. That the Constitutional Convention of any of the States mentioned in the acts to which this is amendatory may provide that at the time of voting upon the ratification of the constitution the registered voters may vote also for members of the House of Representatives of the United States, and for all elective officers provided for by the said constitution; and the same election officers who shall make the return of the votes cast on the ratification or rejection of the constitution, shall enumerate and certify the votes cast for members of Congress.

This act to amend the act passed March 23, 1867, entitled "An act supplementary to 'an act to provide for a more efficient government of the rebel States,' passed March 2, 1867, and to facilitate their restoration," was passed by the Senate February 25, 1868, 28 to 6, and by the House, February 26, 96 to 32. The President received it February 28, and by his failure to return it signed, or with his objections, it became a law March 11, 1868.

Attempts to Reconstruct Alabama.

February 12, 1868, the Sherman bill was introduced in the Senate, declaring Alabama to have adopted a constitution republican in form, and providing for the admission of the State to representation. February 19, Senator Wilson introduced a joint resolution for the admission of Alabama. The House, February 24, referred the constitution of Alabama to the Judiciary Committee, and, March 4, instructed General Grant to report the votes in that State for and against the constitution. March 18, Farnsworth's bill for the admission of Alabama was reported in the House. March 26 the Reconstruction Committee reported a bill to admit Alabama as soon as the legislature ratified the XIVth Amendment. Mr. Spalding offered a substitute, making the constitution framed the law for a provisional government; authorizing State officers-elect to qualify May 1, 1868; authorizing the Governor to convene the legislature and to submit the constitution, with legislative amendments, for ratification; and when the people had ratified the constitution, and the legislature had adopted the XIVth Amendment, "the constitution may be presented to Congress for its approval." This substitute was agreed to, 77 to 55. The bill was then passed, 102 to 29, but was not taken up in the Senate. March 28 the House received the report of General Meade, stating that the whole vote cast in Alabama fell short of one-half of the registered voters by 8,114, and that the constitution, therefore, was not ratified. The State was subsequently included in the "Omnibus Bill" of June 25, 1868.

The Arkansas Bill.

May 4, 1868, the House received the report of General Gillem, that Arkansas had adopted its constitution by a majority of 1,316; the day following the constitution was received from the President, and the papers were referred to the Reconstruction Committee, which reported, May 7, a bill to admit Arkansas to representation. May 8 the bill was passed, 110 to 32. In the Senate, June 1, Mr. Drake moved an amendment, making the "fundamental condition" that suffrage should never be denied to any person on account of race or color, which was adopted, 26 to 14, and the bill passed, 34 to 8. The House reported the bill back with a substitute, and a committee of conference reported the bill as annexed, the Senate passing it without division June 6, and in the House, June 8, a motion to table the report being lost, yeas 27, nays 108. The text of the bill is as follows:

Whereas, the people of Arkansas, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the more efficient government of the rebel States," passed March 2, 1867, and the acts supplementary thereto, have framed and adopted a constitution of State government, which is republican, and the legislature of said State has duly ratified the amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed by the Thirty-ninth Congress, and known as article fourteen: Therefore,

Be it enacted, &c., That the State of Arkansas is entitled and admitted to Representation in Congress as one of the States of the Union, upon the following fundamental condition: That the constitution of Arkansas shall never be so amended or changed as to deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the United States of the right to vote who are entitled to vote by the constitution herein recognized, except as a punishment for such crimes as are now felonies at common law, whereof they shall have been duly convicted, under laws equally applicable to all the inhabitants of said State: Provided, That any alteration of said constitution prospective in its effect may be made in regard to the time and place of residence of voters.

June 20 the President returned the bill with his objections; that it was based upon the assumption that Congress may at its pleasure exclude a State from the Union and deprive it of representation; that if Arkansas is not in the Union, this bill does not admit it; if it is in the Union, no legislation is necessary to declare it entitled to representation; he objects to the "fundamental condition" as unconstitutional, and to the test oath in the State constitution which compels every voter to swear, "I accept the civil and political equality of all men," when a large proportion, if not majority, of the voters in all the States "do not believe in or accept the practical equality of Indians, Mongolians, or negroes, with the race to which they belong." The House immediately repassed the bill, 111 to 31, and the Senate, June 22, repassed the bill, 30 to 7. On the same day, Benjamin F. Rice, of Minnesota, and Alexander McDonald, of Kansas, were sworn in as Senators from Arkansas. June 23, the House Committee on Elections reported in favor of admitting three representatives elect from Arkansas, which was adopted, 101 to 27, and the men were sworn in. The forty-five democratic members of the House then offered a formal protest, in which they declared that—

"The recognized presence of three persons on the floor of this House from the State of Arkansas, sent here by military force acting under a Brigadier-General of the army, but nevertheless claiming to be members of this Congress, and to share with us the representation of free States, in the imposition of taxes and customs and other laws upon our people, makes it our imperative duty in this, the first case, to remonstrate most solemnly, and to protest as solemnly against this perilous and destructive innovation upon the principles and practices of our hitherto constitutional self-government. The so-called reconstruction acts which created the military governments in other Southern States to share with us in the legislative power of the Northern and Western free people, we have every reason to believe have been held to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States, the public declaration of which fact was avoided only by the extraordinary and strange device of this Congress in snatching jurisdiction from the court in the McCardle case, when such a public decision was about to be made by one of the three great branches of the Government; and it seems then that after the Executive vetoed these acts as unconstitutional, the Judiciary adjudicated them to be so, while a Congress, the creation of but 27 of the 37 States of the Union, overrides these equal and co-ordinate branches of that Government—first, by voting down the vetoes; next, by multiplying amendments to the Constitution. That some of the now so-called bayonet constitutions from the South propose absurd and cruel tests; absurd, as in Arkansas, where is interwoven in the organic law a mere party test between the radical reconstructionists and the democratic conservatives, such as would exclude from voting, if living there, the thousands, the tens of thousands and hundreds of thousands of democrats in the free States; and cruel, as in Alabama, where no white man can vote who will not forever forswear his own race and color, and perjure himself by swearing in defiance of the law of God, that the negro is equal, and forever to be his equal, at the ballot-box, in the jury box, with the cartouche box, in the school, in the college, in the house and home, and by the fireside; in short, in every way everywhere. in these other Southern States. * * * There is no government but constitutional government, and hence all bayonet-made, all Congress-imposed constitutions are of no weight, authority, or sanction, save that enforced by arms, an element of power unknown to Americans in peace. * * We protest against going into the now proposed copartnership of military dictators and negroes in the administration of this government."

Further Reconstruction.

March 23, 1868, the Reconstruction Committee received "The Florida Constitutional Convention—its History" with two constitutions adopted by two Conventions; and March 31, "The Proceedings of the Florida Convention," to which papers reference is made in the paragraph "Florida," in "The Third District." May 5, the Constitutions of South Carolina and Arkansas were submitted to the same committee. May 6, the Secretary of War transmitted to the House "reports relative to the condition of the Second military district, and the views of the General of the army relative to questions presented therein."—which were a repetition of Grant's despatch to Meade, March 2, that "The officers elected under the new Constitution of Georgia are not officers of the provisional government referred to in the reconstruction acts, nor are they officers elected under any so-called State authority, and are not therefore, required to take the oath prescribed in section 9, act of July 19, 1867. The eligibility to hold office must be determined by the new Constitution, and the amendment to the United States Constitution designated as article XIV." May 11, the President transmitted the Constitutions of North Carolina and Louisiana. The same day, the Reconstruction Committee reported a bill to admit North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia and Alabama to representation. Mr. Bingham submitted an amendment slightly changing the "fundamental conditions." May 12, in response to a resolution of the House, General Grant transmitted the votes cast in several States for and against Constitutions as follows: North Carolina, for Constitution, 92,590; against 71,820; South Carolina, for, 70,758; against, 27,288; Georgia, for, 89,007; against, 71,309; Louisiana, for, 66,152; against, 48,739; Alabama, for, 69,807; against, 1,005. May 13, was referred to the Senate Committee on Military Affars and the Militia a letter of General Grant giving, in compliance with a resolution of December 5, 1867, a statement of the number of white and black voters registered in each of the States subject to the reconstruction acts of Congress." In the First district, Virginia, there were registered 120,101 whites and 105,832 blacks; in the Second district, North Carolina, 106,721 whites and 72,932 blacks; South Carolina, 46,882 whites, and 80,650 blacks; in the Third district, Georgia, 96,333 whites and 95,168 blacks; Alabama, 61,295 whites and 104,518 blacks; Florida, 11,914 whites and 16,089 blacks; in the Fourth district; Mississippi, the total registration (voters not classed by color), was 139,690; Arkansas, not classed, 66,831; in the Fifth district, Louisiana, 45,218 whites and 84,436 blacks; Texas, 59,633 whites and 49,497 blacks. From Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas no returns were made of the number disfranchised; in North Carolina, 12,179 were disfranchised; in South Carolina, 8,869; in Georgia, 10,500; and in Florida, 550. May 18, the Secretary of War communicated to the Senate "A corrected copy of the Constitution framed by the Virginia Convention, as furnished by General J. M. Schofield." May 21, the President transmitted the Constitution of Georgia; May 29, the Constitution of Florida, as ratified; and, June 2, the General of the army transmitted General Meade's and General Canby's reports relative to elections in Georgia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

The "Omnibus" Bill.

May 14, 1868, the House took up the Reconstruction bill reported May 11, and by a vote of 79 to 50 inserted a provision amending section 17, article 5, of the Georgia Constitution (!) A motion to strike Alabama from the bill, that State not having ratified its Constitution according to law, was lost, yeas 60, nays 74. The House then passed the bill, 168 to 35; May 16, the Senate referred the bill to the Judiciary Committee, with Mr. Trumbull's amendment, striking out Alabama and substituting Florida; and it was so reported June 2. On motion of Mr. Wilson, Alabama was inserted, yeas 22, nays 21. June 10, Mr. Sherman moved to strike out the provision amending the Georgia Constitution, which was lost, yeas 8, nays 35. The bill was further amended and passed, yeas 31, nays 5. The House Reconstruction Committee, June 12, recommended concurrence in the amendments. Mr. Farmsworth moved to strike out Florida, which was lost, yeas 45, nays 99. The amendments were then concurred in, yeas 111, nays 28. The following is the text?

"Whereas the people of North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida have, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the more efficient government of the rebel States," passed March 2, 1867, and the acts supplementary thereto, framed Constitutions of State government which are Republican, and have adopted said Constitutions by large majorities of the votes cast at the elections held for the ratification or rejection of the same: Therefore,

Be it enacted, &c. That each of the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida, shall be entitled and admitted to representation in Congress as a State of the Union when the Legislature of such State shall have duly ratified the amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed by the thirty-ninth Congress, and known as article fourteen, upon the following fundamental conditions: That the Constitutions of neither of said States shall ever be so amended or changed as to deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the United States of the right to vote in said State, who are enitled to vote by the Constitution thereof herein recognized, except as a punishment for such crimes as are now felonies at common law, whereof they shall have been duly convicted under laws equally applicable to all the inhabitants of said State: Provided, That any alteration of said Constitution may be made with regard to the time and place of residence of voters; and the State of Georgia shall only be entitled and admitted to representation upon this further fundamental condition: that the first and third subdivisions of section seventeen of the fifth article of the Constitution of said State, except the proviso to the first subdivision, shall be null and void, and that the general assembly of said State by solemn public act shall declare the assent of the State to the foregoing fundamental condition.

SEC. 2. That if the day fixed for the first meeting of the Legislature of either of said States by the Constitution or ordinance thereof shall have passed or have so nearly arrived before the passage of this act that there shall not be time for the Legislature to assemble at the period fixed, such Legislature shall convene at the end of twenty days from the time this act takes effect, unless the Governor elect shall sooner convene the same.

SEC. 3. That the first section of this act shall take effect as to each State, except Georgia, when such State, shall, by its Legislature duly ratify article fourteen of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, proposed by the Thirty-ninth Congress, and as to the State of Georgia when it shall in addition give the assent of said State to the fundamental condition hereinbefore imposed upon the same; and thereupon the officers of each State duly elected and qualified under the Constitution thereof shall be inaugurated without delay; but no person prohibited from holding office under the United States or under any State, by section three of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, known as article fourteen, shall be deemed eligible to any office in either of said States, unless relieved from disability as provided in said amendment; and it is hereby made the duty of the President within ten days after receiving official information of the ratification of said amendment by the legislature of either of said States to issue a proclamation announcing that fact.

June 25 the President vetoed the bill, referring for objections to his veto of the Arkansas bill, and the bill was immediately repassed over the veto, in the Senate, yeas 35, nays 8; in the House, yeas 107, nays 31. Shortly after the passage of this bill over the veto, the Senate, in addition to the Senators from Arkansas, admitted A. S. Welsh, of Michigan, and T. W. Osborne, of New York, as Senators from Florida; W. P. Kellogg, of Illinois, and John S. Harris, of Pennsylvania, as Senators from Louisiana; J. D. Abbott, of New Hampshire, and John Pool, of North Carolina, as Senators from North Carolina; and F. A. Sawyer, of Massachusetts, and T. J. Robertson, of South Carolina, as Senators from South Carolina. The House admitted six members from Alabama, three from Arkansas, one from Florida, seven from Georgia, five from Louisiana, seven from North Carolina, and four from South Carolina—33 in all, of whom five were Democrats, twenty-eight Republicans, and seventeen were from States other than those which they claimed to represent.

Removal of Political Disabilities.

To qualify some even of the new members of Congress, and to permit rebels who had become Republicans to hold office in their own States, and to override the Reconstruction acts, it became necessary for Congress to pass private acts "for the removal of certain disabilities from the persons therein named." Several of these bills were passed in June and July, the text generally running: "That all legal and political disabilities imposed by the United States upon the following-named citizens of the several States hereinafter mentioned, in consequence of participation in the recent rebellion, be, and the same are hereby removed, namely" (giving the names.) It is one of the curiosities of reconstruction that Michael Hahn, who under the Lincoln-Butler reconstruction of Louisiana in 1862 was elected to Congress from that State; and who, under the Lincoln-Banks reconstruction of the same State, was elected and qualified in 1864 as Governor of Louisiana, and was subsequently chosen by the Legislature in the same year as a United States Senator, appears in a special act, approved July, 27, 1868, as "Michael Hahn, of New Orleans," now first "relieved from legal and political disabilities" as a person "engaged in the late rebellion." Cases of this kind were further simplified by the adoption in Congress, (approved July 11, 1868), of the following "oath of office to be taken by persons from whom legal disabilities shall have been removed:"

Be it enacted, &c., That whenever any person who has participated in the late rebellion, and from whom all legal disabilities arising therefrom have been removed by act of Congress by a vote of two-thirds of each House, has been or shall be elected or appointed to any office or place of trust in or under the government of the United States, he shall, before entering upon the duties thereof, instead of the oath prescribed by the act of July 2, 1862, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."

The so-called "Electoral College" Bill.

July 11, 1868, the House passed the following resolution as amended by the Senate (after the word Provided):

Resolved, &c., That none of the States whose inhabitants were lately in rebellion shall be entitled to representation in the electoral college for the choice of President or Vice-President of the United States, nor shall any electoral votes be received or counted from any of such States, unless at the time prescribed by law for the choice of electors the people of such States, pursuant to the acts of Congress in that behalf, shall have, since March 4, 1867, adopted a Constitution of State government under which a State government shall have been organized and shall be in operation, nor unless such election of electors shall have been held under the authority of such Constitution and government, and such State shall have also become entitled to representation in Congress, pursuant to the acts of Congress in that behalf: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply to any State which was represented in Congress March 4, 1867.

July 20, the President vetoed the resolution, on the ground that the manner of receiving and counting the electoral votes are in plain terms prescribed by the Constitution, which imperatively requires that the President of the Senate shall open all the certificates and the votes shall be counted. Congress has no power to receive the electoral votes or reject them. The whole power is exhausted when, in the presence of the two Houses, the votes are counted and the result declared. The resolution assumes a power which is no where delegated to Congress. Believing that the States were never out of the Union, Congress has no more power to reject their votes than those of States which have been uniformly loyal to the Federal Union. The President reiterates that the State governments organized under acts of Congress, and under military control, are illigitimate and of no validity whatever; that votes cast in obedience to the so called Reconstruction acts cannot be legally received and counted, while the only votes that can be counted are those cast in pursuance of the laws in force in the States prior to the legislation on Reconstruction. The bill was repassed the same day by a strict party vote—in the Senate 45 to 8, and in the House 134 to 36. The object and effect of the bill was to exclude the electoral votes of Virginia, Mississippi, and Texas, and to prevent these States from participating in the Presidential election of 1868.

Reorganization of the Military Districts.

The following order was issued from the headquarters of the army at Washington, July 28, 1868, approved by the President, signed by General Grant, and published for the information of the government, of the army, and all concerned:

The Commanding Generals of the Second, Third, Fourth, and Fifth Military Districts, having officially reported that the States of Arkansas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia, Florida, and Alabama have fully complied with the acts of Congress, known as the Reconstruction acts, including the act passed June 22, 1868, entitled "An act to admit the State of Arkansas to representation in Congress," and the act passed June 25, 1868, entitled "An act to admit the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida to representation in Congress," and that consequently so much of the act of March 2, 1867 and the acts supplementary thereto, as provide for the organization of military districts, subject to the military authority of the United States as herein provided, has become inoperative in said States, and that the commanding generals have ceased to exercise in said States the military powers conferred by acts of Congress, therefore the following changes will be made in the organization and command of military districts and geographical departments:

1. The Second and Third Military Districts having ceased to exist, the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida will constitute the Department of the South, Maj.-General George G. Meade to command; headquarters at Atlanta, Georgia.

2. The Fourth Military District will now consist only of the State of Mississippi, and will continue to be commanded by Brevet Major-General A. C. Gillem.

3. The Fifth Military District will now consist of the State of Texas, and will be commanded by Brevet Major-General J. J. Reynolds; headquarters, Austin, Texas.

4. The States of Louisiana and Arkansas will constitute the Department of Louisiana, Brevet Major-General L. H. Rousseau is assigned to the command; headquarters at New Orleans, Louisiana. Until the arrival of General Rousseau at New Orleans, Brevet Major-General Buchanan will command the department.

Subsequent orders from General Grant to individual district and department commanders are noted in the text that follows. October 31, general orders were issued from headquarters, by command of General Grant, publishing to the army, by direction of the President, the provisions of the Constitution and laws of the United States in relation to the election for a President and Vice-President of the United States, together with an act of Congress prohibiting persons engaged in the military or naval service from interfering in any general or special election in any State. For convenience of reference, as well as arrangement, the details of "Reconstruction in the Military Districts," annexed, are given under the head of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, and Fifth districts as originally defined, and by States in each district.

Reconstruction in the Military Districts.

First District, (Virginia). Nov. 2, 1867, the vote on Convention was announced as follows: 107,342 for, and 61,887 against. December 3, the Convention met in Richmond. March 23, 1868, General Schofield appointed eight City Councilmen in Richmond. March 24, the Convention adopted the "iron-clad" oath for office-holders, 40 to 32. April 4, at the expiration of Governor Pierrepont's term, Gen. Schofield appointed Henry H. Wells, of Alexandria, Governor of the State, and April 7 he was inaugurated. April 14, Gen. Schofield appointed a Mayor and other city officers in Alexandria. April 7, the Convention adopted a Constitution which provides: That slavery shall not exist; all citizens of the State are declared to possess equal civil and political rights and public privileges; every male citizen of the United States, resident of the State twelve months before election, can vote, except certain persons engaged in the rebellion; the exception enumerates officers or those who have held office, from Senators to Clerks of County Courts and Attorneys, who are disfranchised unless their disabilities are removed by a vote of three-fifths of both Houses of the Legislature; all persons entering upon office must take an oath recognizing and accepting "the civil and political equality of all men before the laws," and in addition the test oath prescribed by the act of July 2, 1862; the Legislature shall enact a registry law; the Governor has the veto power, subject to the passage by two thirds; a uniform system of public free schools is to be established and a tax laid therefor; the militia is to consist of all abled-bodied males between 18 and 45; homestead exemption is provided. The Convention adjourned April 17, after passing an ordinance submitting the Constitution for ratification June 2, at which time also State officers and members of Congress were to be elected; and the Assembly was to meet June 24. April 18, Gen. Schofield removed the State Treasurer and appointed another. April 24, Gen. Schofield recommended that the section of the Constitution requiring the test oath of 1862 for State officers should be submitted separately, and announced that the vote on the Constitution would not be taken till Congress made an appropriation therefor. April 30, he appointed a Mayor and City Officers in Richmond. June 2, Gen. George Stoneman assumed command of the district in place of General Schofield, who entered upon the duties of Secretary of War. The Constitution has not (November, 1868), been submitted, nor was Virginia included in the "Omnibus" bill, and was excluded from voting in the Presidential election by the Electoral College bill. November 18, General Stoneman reported on the condition of the district to General Grant—that the policy pursued by Gen. Schofield, with some modifications, had been followed; that if the XIVth article vacated all the offices in the State there would be no possibility of filling the places under the provisions of the Reconstruction laws; he recommends a repeal of the 9th section of the act of July 19, 1867; since August the forces in the district have been reduced, and by expirations of terms of service, by January 1, 1869, the entire force will be below 1,000 in the aggregate. The report contains a correspondence between Robert Ould, Marmaduke Johnson, and Thomas J. Evans, a Committee of the State Central Conservative Committee, appointed to confer with General Stoneman in reference to holding an election for Presidental electors. A writ of habeas corpus has been applied for, and is understood to be granted, to test the legality of the action of the district commander in regard to the XIVth Amendment. The officers connected with the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands in Virginia, are declared to have managed with ability and discretion. Instances, though rare, had been brought to General Stoneman's attention where violence has been used towards negroes, but those cases were confined to individuals, and are not chargeable to communities. He recommends "in consideration of the now reconstructed condition of the State, with no Legislature to make laws or regulations or appropriations of moneys; with an exhausted treasury, and an apathetic people," the further continuance of the Freedmen's Bureau in some modified form. The officers, both civil and military, have in general performed their duties with willingness worthy of commendation, and to this, "together with the respect for law and justice manifested by the people, white and black, is due the quiet and good order which reigns throughout the Commonwealth." November 25, Chief Justice Chase, in Circuit Court at Richmond, dispensed with the additional test oath prescribed by Congress. He said: "Scruples at taking it, expressed by some of the grand jurors known to be among those best qualified for the responsible duties of their position, have induced us to inquire whether the public interests now demand that the taking of it be required, and we are satisfied that while the matters affirmed in it are proper cause of challenge in particular cases, the ends of justice will be hindered and defeated, rather than promoted and seconded, by directing it to be administered unless some special occasion shall demand it. No such special occasion now exists."

Second District—(North Carolina and South Carolina.) December 31, 1867, General E. R. S. Canby issued an order that judgments of decrees for money, or causes of action, from May 20, 1861, to April 20, 1865, in North Carolina, and from December 19, 1860, to April 29, 1865, in South Carolina, are not to be enforced. Proceedings in any court in either State, recognizing or sanctioning the investment of funds of minors, females, or insane persons in rebel or war securities of either State to be suspended till the validity of such investments is determined by United States courts or by additional legislation. Gen. Canby was relieved by the reorganization order of June 28, and North and South Carolina were incorporated, with Georgia, Alabama, and Florida, in the Department of the South, under command of Gen. George G. Meade.

North Carolina.—December 31, 1867, the Convention was declared carried, and delegates were ordered to meet at Raleigh. Jan. 14, 1868, Convention met. February 12 an ordinance of Convention for collection of taxes was promulgated, and the State Treasurer authorized to pay expenses of Convention. Feb. 24, the Convention adopted an article in the new Constitution, making suffrage general without the test oath. March 16, the Constitution was adopted, the conservative members of the Convention refusing to sign it, and next day the Convention adjourned. April 11, registration closed. April 21, 22, and 23, vote on Constitution—for 92,590, against 71,820, majority 20,770—and election of officers under it. May 12, the Constitution was declared ratified. June 15, W. W. Holden, Governor elect, called a meeting of the Legislature, July, 1; on which day it assembled, and General Canby suspended the test oath. July 2, Legislature adopted the XIVth Amendment. July 4, General Canby announced the suspension of military law in the State; Holden delivered an inaugural and Governor Worth published a protest against the new State government. July 14, Legislature elected U. S. Senators. Aug. 12, Legislature defeated the State police force bill. September 29, by order of the Adjutant-General, the militia of the State are to be enrolled (white and black militia separately) when voters are registered. October 15, new registration throughout the State. October 30, General Nelson A. Miles, commanding "the district of North Carolina," issued an order announcing that the distribution of troops was complete in the district, and that the object of their presence in different localities was "solely for the preservation of peace, and the rendering of assistance in case of disturbances or riotous proceedings which the civil authorities may be unable to suppress. Under no circumstances will officers or soldiers fraternize with political parties or in any manner interfere with the peaceable exercise by all citizens of their rights and privileges. The political campaign has so far progressed with a degree of quietness and good order creditable to all concerned. The record of North Carolina is as yet unmarred by acts of lawlessness; which have in some instances so injuriously affected other communities." The State took part in the Presidential election. [See Election Returns.]

South Carolina.—December 3, 1867, a system of taxation was established to support the provisional government from October 1, 1867, to September 30, 1868. December 28 the election was declared in favor of Convention, which was ordered to assemble at Charleston January 14, 1868, and met on that day. February 6 the Convention promulgated an ordinance for collection of taxes, and the State Treasurer was authorized to pay expenses of convention. February 19 General Canby removed P. C. Gaillard, Mayor of Charleston, and appointed General Burns in his place. The Convention adopted an ordinance requiring all who shall vote for the Constitution to vote also for the regular candidates of the Republican party. March 13 the Convention passed an ordinance invalidating all the acts of the General Assembly since 1860. March 13, election was ordered April 14-16; March 17, Convention adjourned, after adopting a constitution providing, among other things, that Slavery shall be never exist in the State: no person shall be disqualified as a witness, or be prevented from acquiring, holding, and transmitting property, or be subject in law to other restraints or disqualifications in regard to any personal rights than such as are laid upon others; no imprisonment for debt, unless in cases of fraud; homestead exemption; no property qualification necessary to the election to or holding of office; all elections to be free and open, and every inhabitant possessing the qualifications to have the right to elect officers and to be elected; no person to be disfranchised except by the law of the land or the judgment of his peers; distinctions on account of race or color prohibited, and all classes of citizens to enjoy equally all common, public, legal, and political privileges; public officers must take an oath recognizing the supremacy of the Constitution and laws of the United States over the Constitution and laws of any State; persons now disqualified cannot vote or hold office till Congress removes disqualification; no person to be disfranchised for crimes committed when such person was a slave; all the schools and colleges in the State to be open to children and youths without regard to race or color; Presidential electors to be chosen by the people; no debt contracted by the State in behalf of the rebellion to be paid; the militia to consist of all able-bodied male citizens between 18 and 45. This constitution was submitted April 14, 15, 16, and May 2 was announced ratified; vote for 70,758, against 28,288; majority, 50,470. May 7 General Canby ordered the postponement of the assembling of the Legislature till Congress approved the new Constitution. May 26 General Canby removed thirteen Aldermen in Charleston, appointing persons (including seven negroes) to fill their places. July 6 legislature convened, and the day following adopted the XIVth amendment. July 13 General Canby issued an order restoring civil authority in the State when the President proclaims the adoption of the XIVth amendment. July 14 legislature elected United States Senators. August 5 Legislature declared all offices under provisional government vacant. August 20 legislature passed a bill organizing the State police into a semi-military force. September 3 legislature passed a social equality bill. September 26 legislature adjourned. The State voted for Presidential electors. [See Election Returns.]

Third District—(Georgia, Alabama, and Florida.) December 28, 1867, Gen. Pope was removed, and January 6, 1868, General Meade assumed command of the district. January 11 State officers were admonished not to interfere, under color of State authority, with the exercise of military authority. January 15 an order threatened the removal from office of derelict civil officers. February 2 the order of August 12, 1867, ordering that official advertisements should be published only in such papers as were not opposed to reconstruction, was modified so as to apply only to papers which attempted to obstruct the civil officers appointed by the military, in the discharge of their duty, by threats of violence, prosecution, or other penalty to be enforced as soon as military support is withdrawn. February 3 an order permitted voters to vote on constitution "anywhere in the State" on proof of registration. June 28, 1868, the States in this district, with North Carolina and South Carolina, became the Department of the South, General Meade still commanding.

Georgia.—December 9, 1867, the Convention met at Atlanta. January 10, 1868, Governor Jenkins suspended the collection of State taxes to May 1 (the order intending to prevent the payment of expenses of the Convention). January 13 General Meade removed Charles J. Jenkins, Governor, and John Jones, State Treasurer, for failing to co-operate with the Major-General in command, and appointed Brevet Brigadier-General Thomas H. Ruger, Governor, and Captain Charles H. Rockwell, Treasurer. January 17, State Comptroller, John T. Burns, was removed, and Captain Charles Wheaton assigned to the office. January 18 Governor Jenkins stated that the public funds had been removed to New York. January 27 Secretary of State N. C. Barnett was removed, and Captain Wheaton, State Comptroller, assigned to this office also. January 30 Governor Jenkins served notice on General Ruger and Captains Rockwell and Wheaton that he would file a bill in the Supreme Court to enjoin the use of money belonging to the State. February 22 the Convention adopted an ordinance prohibiting imprisonment for debt. March 11 the Convention adopted the constitution, 112 to 14, passed a resolution, 102 to 26, requesting Congress to remove political disabilities from all citizens in Georgia, and adjourned. April 3 General Meade declared Judge Irwin ineligible for the governorship, and April 4, that General John B. Gordon was eligible. Same day General Meade issued an order directing the arrest of all persons who may print and circulate incendiary or threatening letters; conductors of newspapers were prohibited from publishing articles tending to produce intimidation, riot, or bloodshed, and public writers and speakers were enjoined to refrain from inflammatory appeals. April 6 General Meade ordered an election—April 20–23—for State officers and members of Congress. April 16 an order was issued that members of the Legislature must take the test oath. April 20–23 election for State officers and for other officers, civil and municipal, throughout Georgia and for and against the Constitution; vote on Constitution, for, 89,007; against, 71,309; majority, 17,698. The Constitution provides that slavery shall not exist; all persons born or naturalized in the United States and resident in the State are declared citizens; the social status of citizens shall never be the subject of legislation; among the laws of general operation in force are included acts of rebel legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States; and with regard to equality of all citizens, schools, militia, homestead exemption, &c., the same general provisions as in new constitutions of other Southern States. May 11 General Meade officially declared the Constitution ratified. June 30 a military commission sat in Atlanta for the trial of the supposed murderers of Ashburn. July 4 legislature convened at Atlanta, and by order of General Grant General Meade declared Rufus Bullock Governor. July 21 legislature ratified the XIVth amendment. July 22 Governor Bullock was inaugurated. July 23 General Meade ordered restoration of civil government to the State. July 29 legislature elected United States Senators. August 6 legislature elected minor State officers. September 3, the House, 80 to 23, declared negroes ineligible to seats in that body, and expelled twenty-five negro members, who made a formal protest. These negroes were paid $9 a day to the date of their expulsion, and their seats were tendered to the (eligible) candidates who opposed them in the election. September 9 the Governor sent in a list of the successors to the seats with a protest against the expulsion; this protest was returned with a resolution that "the members of each House, and not the Governor, are the judges of the qualifications of members, and keepers of their own consciences," and several of the new members were then sworn in. September 10 the Governor issued a proclamation against armed organizations. September 12 the Senate, 25 to 11, declared negroes ineligible to seats. September 17, the House, 101 to 19, passed a bill excluding negroes from juries. September 18 an appeal of expelled members, signed by the President of the Senate and 63 representatives, prepared for presentation to Congress, and not presented, was published. October 1 legislature defeated a bill to prevent negroes from election to office. October 6 legislature adjourned, to meet in January, 1869. [For vote in November, see Election Returns.] Some of the republicans in Georgia threaten to attempt to invalidate all the acts of the legislature enacted after the expulsion of negroes from that body.

Alabama.—December 6, 1867, the convention adjourned, having adopted a constitution prohibiting slavery, guaranteeing freedom of speech to the press, with responsibility for its abuse; the State shall not engage in any internal improvements; the Governor shall have the pardoning power, but cannot relieve from civil or political disability; all males, otherwise qualified, to be citizens; persons disqualified by the reconstruction acts cannot register, and all who register must take an oath accepting the civil and political equality of all men. December 20 election was ordered February 4, 1868. December 28 all military organizations were prohibited, and no parading of armed men, excepting United States troops, permitted. (This order covered the district.) February 4–8, vote on constitution; for, 69,807,; against, 1,005, which was 8,114 less than half the registered vote, and, according to the reconstruction acts, the constitution was not adopted. February 12 General Meade ordered the election to re-open for five days in five counties. June 23 General Shepherd suppressed the Tuscaloosa Monitor. July 13th the legislature convened at Montgomery and ratified the XIV amendment; Wm. H. Smith was inaugurated Governor by Meade's order. July 27 the legislature ratified the old code of State laws so far as they do not conflict with the new constitution. August 5, the Senate, with one dissenting vote, passed a bill to remove political disabilities, and August 7 the House passed the bill. Same day, the Senate passed a bill, passed by the House the day following, providing for the choice of Presidential electors by the legislature, and, August 11, Governor Smith vetoed the bill. The legislature took no further action in the matter, and, August 12, adjourned to November 2, the Senate having passed a new registration bill, which the House tabled. September 16 the Governor called an extra session of the legislature to consider a registration bill. September 21 legislature adopted a resolution asking the Federal Government for troops, and a delegation went to Washington to urge this demand. September 29 the President referred the resolution to the Secretary of War, who referred it to General Meade, with instructions to "exercise full discretion in his action to the end that in any event the peace may be preserved." October 1 the legislature passed a registration law. October 2 the House turned out a democrat, and gave his seat to a radical, though the committee to whom the case was referred declared that the member was elected by 700 majority, while the contestant to the seat was not even a candidate in the election. October 6 Governor signed the registration bill, and the legislature passed a bill providing for an election in November. [See Election Returns.] October 10 legislature adjourned to assemble November 2, and met on that day. The point has been raised that the acts of this session are illegal on the ground that the law required the election of a new legislature, November 3. The law passed by the legislature to stay the collection of debts has been pronounced unconstitutional. No election has yet been held for members to the 41st Congress.

Florida.—December 28, 1867, the convention was declared carried, delegates were announced, and notified by General Pope to meet at Tallahassee January 20, 1868. On that day only twenty-nine of the forty-six delegates-elect assembled and organized. The following day standing rules were adopted by a unanimous vote, and thirty attaches for the convention were appointed. The conservatives in the convention soon ascertained that the radicals had prepared a constitution with the intention of forcing it through during the detention of the absentees. But little was done for two weeks, during which time forty-one delegates had subscribed to the oath as required by the rules of the convention. February 4 eighteen conservative members withdrew, leaving the convention without a quorum. The President decided that the convention had no power to compel the attendance of absent members, and the twenty-two then went into secret session and sat as a convention from day to day. They voted themselves and their attaches each $10 per day, commencing twenty-three days before the convention assembled, and $8 for every twenty miles' travel. They adopted a constitution and an ordinance relieving eight (rebel) members of the convention from disabilities imposed by the constitution which these eight assisted to adopt. They made nominations for State officers and a member of Congress as a part of their proceedings, nominating the entire ticket from their own number. February 8 they adjourned for a week, sending one of their number with their election ordinance and constitution to General Meade for approval. Meanwhile, the eighteen seceders, who claimed to have left the convention in order that the absentees might arrive, supposing that the convention could only adjourn from day to day till a quorum was present, returned February 10, and with six more members sat in convention, the twenty-four making a quorum. They elected officers and proceeded to the transaction of business. As the day approached to which the minority had adjourned, it was evident that they intended to take forcible possession of the hall, and to reinstate Daniel Richards as president of the convention. More than a thousand men armed with guns and clubs were assembled to assist in this undertaking. The military authorities placed a guard at the capitol. Richards applied to Governor Walker and to Colonel F. F. Flint, commanding the post, to arrest General Horatio Jenkins, Jr., president of the convention, and to reinstate him (Richards), both of whom declined to interfere. February 18, General Meade, who had refused to indorse the action of the adjourned convention of twenty-two delegates, on the ground that a majority of the delegates elected had not signed the constitution, arrived at Tallahassee accompanied by Colonel John T. Sprague, commanding the State. The entire proceedings of both conventions were submitted, and General Meade requested both presidents to resign, and that the convention should reorganize with Colonel Sprague as temporary chairman. Both parties acquiesced, and Colonel Sprague took the chair; forty-five members answered to their names; Jenkins was elected President by a vote of 32 to 13; new rules were adopted; four members were declared ineligible, and their seats were filled by their opponents in the election. February 20 the convention unanimously passed a resolution expunging from the journal all proceedings, except the meeting and adjournment of the convention, from February 3 to February 18. The constitution, adopted after the new convention was organized and signed February 25 by the president and forty-four members, was submitted May 4, 5, 6, and was ratified—for, 14,520; against, 9,491; majority for, 5,029. It contains the general provisions of the other new constitutions for the Southern States; forbids civil or political distinction on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. The oath to be taken by electors and officers requires only support of and loyalty to the Constitution and Government of the United States and the State. June 9 the legislature adopted the XIII and XIV amendments. June 12 Harrison Reed was sworn in as Governor. June 17 and 18 legislature elected United States Senators. July 1 Governor Walker surrendered the State government to Governor Reed. July 23, in answer to application for troops, Secretary of War Schofield notified Governor Reed that troops are to act in suppressing insurrections, in cases presented by the Governor and legislature, when it would be lawful for the President to employ the military forces of the United States. August 3 legislature passed a bill vesting the choice of Presidential electors in the legislature. August 5 legislature passed a bill appointing a spy police, number and pay at discretion of the Governor, and throughout the State. August 6 legislature passed over Governor's veto a bill to pay members a year's pay for services from June to December, and adjourned to November 3. When the legislature met it impeached Governor Harrison Reed for "high crimes and misdemeanors in office." The articles were: 1, charging him with lying; 2, incompetency, in filling commissions to officers in blank for irresponsible persons to issue; 3, declaring seats of the legislature vacant before members were duly elected and returned; 4, embezzlement; 5, corruption and bribery in selling and bartering prominent offices in the State for money. November 7, William H. Gleason, Lieutenant-Governor, issued a proclamation that Governor Reed had been impeached, and by the constitution of the State was debarred from exercising the functions of the executive; that the administration devolved upon the Lieutenant-Governor, who by this proclamation took possession of the executive department in all its parts, and called upon citizens to support the government and obey the laws. The same day Governor Reed issued a proclamation that he was the rightful Governor of the State, and that he should continue to exercise the power and authority, and discharge the duties of the office till the judicial tribunals of the State should determine otherwise. The impeachment question became virtually a struggle between the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor for the government, each claiming to be Governor. There were also two claimants to the office of Secretary of State, G. J. Alden, who refused to resign the office at the request of the Governor, and Jonathan C. Gibbs was appointed in his place, and who secured possession of the Secretary's office, while Alden retained the State seal. November 13 Reed's case against Lieutenant-Governor Gleason and Secretary Alden for conspiracy was dismissed on the ground of insufficiency in the affidavit. November 16 Lieutenant-Governor Gleason issued a proclamation that the legality of the late special session of the State legislature was recognized by Governor Reed, who sent messages to and transacted business with that body; that Reed was impeached, and therefore under arrest and disqualified from office; that, nevertheless, Reed pronounced the impeachment void, and proceeded in his office as if no impeachment had been preferred; this proclamation therefore declared Reed disqualified till acquitted by the Senate, and that the office devolved upon the Lieutenant-Governor, who called upon citizens to aid him in exercising the powers and discharging the duties of the office. This document was signed by Gleason as "Acting Governor," and was countersigned by Alden as Secretary of State. Meanwhile Governor Reed held a duplicate of the State seal, and, November 9, appointed A. R. Meek Attorney-General of the State, and, November 17, "Acting Governor" Gleason appointed F. A. Dockeray to the same office. November 25, in the Supreme Court of the State, advisory opinions were delivered in answer to questions submitted by Governor Reed, and sustaining his position. The opinions are unanimous, voluminous, and well fortified by precedents and authorities, and sustain Governor Reed's position. They decide that no legislature assembled under Governor Reed's proclamation for a special session, and that if there had been a legal assembly the form of impeachment was irregular and not in accordance with law or precedent. They furthermore declare that the mere passage of resolutions of impeachment does not impeach. Arguments on a writ of quo warranto against Gleason began November 27, and the effort to impeach the Governor finally failed. October 31, 1868, General Meade transmitted an official report giving an abstract of operations under his command while in charge or the Third District, and subsequently in command of the new Department of the South. He says: "Soon after taking command of the Department of the South, I received communications from the Governors of North and South Carolina urging the use of the troops in sustaining the civil governments in these States, and notifying me of their possessing satisfactory evidence of armed bodies being organized for the purpose of overthrowing the government. I had previously received somewhat similar communications from the Governors of Georgia, Florida, and Alabama. The sum and substance of these letters were an admission that the several State governments were powerless, unable to enforce the laws without the aid and co-operation of the military. I replied to these several applications that I could find nothing in the existing laws or the instructions from superior authority which would justify my answering their call, which virtually amounted to taking charge of the State governments, employing the civil officers as agents of the military; that my sole and exclusive duty was to preserve the peace, and that alone, after it was evident that the civil power was unable so to do, and had called on me in the manner prescribed by the law. These applications became so numerous and pressing, that, in view of the approaching Presidential election, on which day, by the act of Congress approved March 2, 1865, I deemed I was authorized to employ the military forces to preserve the peace, and to calm the apprehensions of the anxious and make known my views to the evil-disposed, I issued early in October an order distributing the troops in the several States in the department, and gave in the order not only instructions to the officers and men, but deemed it my duty to make an appeal to the people of the several States, urging calmness and abstinence from those political excitements tending to riot and bloodshed. Although particularly careful to require all intervention of the troops to be subordinate to, and in aid of, and in co-operation with, the civil authorities, this order was misconstrued and subjected to the most virulent criticism. I am gratified, however, in being able to state that the effect of the order and the movements made by virtue of it were in the highest degree satisfactory."

Fourth District, (Mississippi and Arkansas.) The following Department Orders were issued: Dec. 5, 1867, a convention was declared carried by a majority of the registered vote in each State, and the conventions were ordered to assemble January 7, 1868, at Jackson, Mississippi, and at Little Rock, Arkansas, Dec. 5. Persons not in military service, or engaged in executing the laws, were prohibited from carrying concealed weapons. Dec. 12, citizens arrested by the military were to be furnished with a written copy of the charges; writs of habeas corpus by U. S. Courts must be respected by the military. Dec. 14, Vagrancy must be suppressed. Dec. 17, All able freedmen must earn their support or be liable to arrest as vagrants. Dec. 28, General Ord was ordered to turn over the command of the district to General Irwin McDowell. Jan. 27, 1868, questions arising between debtors and creditors, excepting cases "affecting the rights of freedmen," to be submitted hereafter to the civil courts. June 4, General Irwin McDowell assumed command of the district in place of General Ord. June 30, General McDowell was relieved and General Gillem was assigned to the command, the district then consisting only of the State of Mississippi.

Mississippi. Dec. 9, 1867, Governor Humphreys issued a proclamation, that whereas combinations and conspiracies were forming among the blacks "to seize the lands and establish farms, expecting and hoping that Congress will arrange a plan of division and distribution, and that unless this was done by January, they will proceed to help themselves, and are confident that they will be victors in any conflict with the whites," he warns these blacks that they have been deceived and that they cannot succeed. At the same time he admonished the whites to deal justly with the blacks, and in no case to undertake to redress wrongs, except in the manner authorized by law. General Gillem ordered the arrest of those who had advised freedmen to take arms and seize lands, and instructed the freedmen that Congress had no intention to take land from the late masters for the benefit of the former slaves. January 7, 1868, the convention assembled at Jackson. January 9, an order restored to the civil courts the jurisdiction of general cases of horse stealing. Feb. 4, the General commanding refused to issue an order for the relief of debtors, on the ground that the homestead and exemption laws of the State placed every one beyond the necessity of such protection. April 13, an order remitted to civil courts jurisdiction of any violation of the State laws in relation to carrying concealed weapons. April 17, twelve members of the convention resigned; a resolution was adopted excluding newspaper reporters after date. May 2, General Gillem removed the mayor of Jackson and appointed another. May 15, members of the convention signed the drafted constitution. May 18, convention adjourned. May 19, election was ordered June 22. June 16, General McDowell removed Governor Humphreys and appointed General Adelbert Ames military Governor, and Captain J. Meyers Attorney-General in place of Hooker, removed. June 22, the constitution was voted upon—for 56,231, against 63,860—and was defeated by 7,629 votes. Meanwhile, Gov. Humphreys refused to vacate his office, and June 23 the military power took possession. Mississippi was not permitted to take part in the Presidential election, and at this date (November 30, 1868) is still "unreconstructed" and under military government. A republican convention sitting in Jackson adjourned Nov. 26, after preparing an address to be submitted to Congress, asking that body to declare the defeated constitution ratified and the State officers elected. A number of prominent republicans opposed this, inasmuch as the commanding General had forwarded his official report to Congress that the constitution had been defeated.

Arkansas. January 7, 1868, the convention met, and Feb. 14 adjourned, after adopting, by a vote of 45 to 21, a constitution which was submitted March 13. General Gillem requested the convention to change the time of election, and the request was refused. The vote on constitution was, for 27,913, against 26,597, majority 1,316. This constitution provides, that paramount allegiance is due to the Federal Government; the equality of all persons before the law is recognized, nor shall any citizen be deprived of any right, privilege, or immunity, nor exempted from any burden or duty, on account of race, color, or previous condition. The oath for persons before registering or voting requires the acceptance of the civil and political equality of all men. With regard to disqualifications, disfranchisements, and other matters, the constitution is similar to those specially prepared for other Southern States. April 3, the Legislature met at Little Rock. April 9, General Gillem refused to recognize the legality of the legislature. June 29, General Grant ordered Gen. McDowell to turn over the State Government to the officers elect. Oct. 15, certain arms destined to Little Rock were seized in transit on board a steamer on the Mississippi and thrown into the river. Oct. 17, Governor Powell Clayton notified the Secretary of War of this occurrence, and declared that an armed resistance to the laws was contemplated, in which event the U. S. forces in Arkansas would be entirely inadequate to preserve order. Nov. 1, Gov. Clayton issued an order declaring the registration invalid in the counties of Ashley, Bradley, Columbia, Hot Springs, Lafayette, Mississippi, Woodruff, Shark, Craighead, Silver, and Green. These counties, embracing about one-sixth of the registration of the State, were estimated to give 6,000 democratic majority, covering three Congressional districts, of which the democrats were thus deliberately defrauded. Nov. 9, Gov. Clayton authorized raising 60,000 militia. Nov. 18, he declared martial law in eleven counties, threatened it in other counties, and called for the speedy organization of the militia. Nov. 25, the legislature in special session at last secured a quorum, received the Governor's message detailing the "Ku-Klux" outrages, and approved the declaration of martial law. The Governor recommended the funding of the State debt, and declared his intention to use the military until peace, security, and obedience to the laws prevail throughout the State. For the special reconstruction of this State see "Arkansas Bill." The State in part, voted in November.—See Election Returns.

Fifth District. (Louisiana and Texas.)

General W. S. Hancock assumed command of this district Nov. 29, 1867, relieving Gen. Mower who temporarily commanded after the removal of Gen. Sheridan. He immediately rescinded several orders issued by Gen. Sheridan, particularly one requiring that jurors should be drawn from the list of registered voters including white persons and negroes. He declared that the admissibility of jurors belonged wholly to the civil courts; he announced his gratification that peace and quiet reigned in the department, and his purpose to respect the liberties of the people. Dec. 2, he revoked Sheridan's appointment of R. King Cutler as a judge in place of A. Cazanat, and reinstated the latter. Jan. 1, 1868, he issued an order disclaiming judicial functions in civil cases and declaring that "the rights of litigants do not depend on the views of the General. Arbitrary power, such as he had been urged to assume, has no existance here. It is not to be found in the laws of Louisiana or Texas. It cannot be derived from any act or acts of Congress. It is restrained by a constitution, and prohibited from action in many particulars." Jan. 11, he set aside Sheridan's memoranda (in May 1867) of disqualifications and questions to be proposed for the registers, declaring that he dissented from the construction given to the reconstruction laws therein, and registers were ordered to be guided by their own interpretation of the laws and the XIV amendment. March 6, General Hancock asked to be relieved from the command of the district, and March 16 was succeeded by Gen. R. C. Buchanan. September 15, under the reorganization of the military districts, Gen. L. H. Rousseau assumed command of the "Department of Louisiana and Arkansas," with headquarters at New Orleans.

Louisiana—January 2, 1868, General Hancock appointed Joshua Baker Governor, in place of B. F. Flanders resigned. January 8, Governor Baker took the oath of office. February 7, General Hancock removed certain negro Aldermen in New Orleans; General Grant directed him to reinstate them; General Hancock remonstrated, but February 26, he revoked his order of removal. March 2, the Convention, 64 to 6, adopted the new Constitution, and March 9, after 81 days' session adjourned. March 11, revision of registration lists was ordered. March 14, 200 prominent citizens of New Orleans publicly approved General Hancock's administration. April 17-18, vote on Constitution—for 66,152, against 48,739, majority 17,413. June 2, names of State and parish officers and of members-elect of the Legislature announced, but the Legislature was forbidden to convene till the commanding general was officially notified of the acceptance by Congress of the new Constitution. This Constitution is in the main like the rest prepared for the Southern States; it makes citizens equal without regard to race, color, or previous condition; the oath for members of the Legislature and other officers makes them swear to accept the civil and political equality of all men. By General Hancock's order the civil government provided for by the election was declared provisional in its character till after the adoption of the XIVth Amendment, and according to article 158 of the new Constitution the officers-elect were to enter upon their duties the first Monday in November, after the election from which time their terms would date. June 6, municipal officers-elect in New Orleans were ordered to be installed June 10. S. B. Packard, chairman of the board of registration issued a counter order, and was arrested therefor, but was afterwards released on recommendation of General Grant, who telegraphed as a reason for the suspension of action in this case "the legislation now pending relative to the admission of Louisiana." June 10, Mayor Heath refused to give way to Mayor-elect Conway, in New Orleans, and was arrested, and then released. June 19, Gen. Buchanan issued an order based upon a telegram from Gen. Grant, that the State and municipal officers-elect could not be installed till the State was admitted. June 29 (after the issue of the military order reorganizing the military districts) by order of Gen. Grant, the officers-elect took their seats, and the legislature convened at New Orleans. June 30, Gen. Grant sent a telegram to Gen. Buchanan, asserting that members of the legislature are required only to take the oath prescribed by the State constitution. July 1, the test oath was suspended, and the members sworn in. Artillery and cavalry surrounded the square while the legislature sat. July 2, the legislature adopted the XIVth amendment, and, July 8, elected U. S. Senators. July 13, Henry C. Warmoth, of Illinois, was inaugurated as Governor of Louisiana. July 29, the legislature passed a bill to arm ununiformed militia. Soon after his inauguration, Warmoth sent an appeal to Washington for troops, and the matter was referred to Gen. Buchanan. Aug. 11, the legislature passed a bill placing the militia at the Governor's disposal. Aug. 18, Gen. Buchanan ordered that the military should in no case interfere with the civil authorities, except under special instructions from headquarters. Aug. 31, the Senate ousted Senator E. L. Jewell, and gave his seat to a mulatto named Pinchbeck. Sept. 1, Gen. Buchanan's order defined the official relations between military and civil officers in the State. Sept. 17, the State board of registration refused to permit Geo. A. Fosdick to be put on the board, declaring that they would allow no democrat to be placed on any board of registers or supervisors. September 18, the legislature passed a negro equality bill, prohibiting distinctions in public conveyances or places of resort on account of race or color, under penalty of fine and imprisonment. September 21, Warmoth issued a proclamation calling for an election, November 3, of Presidential electors and members of Congress. September 25, registration in New Orleans was refused to all foreign-born citizens naturalized in the Fifth and Sixth District courts since July, 1868. September 26, Warmoth vetoed the negro equality bill, and September 28, the House sustained the veto. September 30, the Senate declared the action of the New Orleans registration board, with regard to naturalized citizens, unwarranted. On the same day the House unseated two white members, and gave their places to negroes; notwithstanding that the majority report of the committee declared that the whites were entitled to the seats, the minority report was adopted, 37 to 17. October 20, the legislature adjourned. Louisiana, in New Orleans especially, and in parishes adjacent, was much disturbed from time to time through the year by negro riots. In the November election the negroes generally absented themselves from the polls, and the democrats and conservatives carried the State. (See Election Returns.) General Rousseau, in his report to General Grant, November 20, says: "The leaders of the republican party having advised the negroes to stay away from the polls, they stayed away. It was neither in my place nor in my power to hunt up the colored voters, who purposely remained in their houses, and drag them to the polls." Acknowledging the efforts of Governor Warmoth and other republicans to assist in preserving order, the General adds: "But the aid they gave was greatly counteracted by the indiscreet and unwarrantable course pursued by other and unworthy members of the republican party, who, caring little for the government of the United States and less for the permanent reconstruction of the State, sought only their own personal aggrandizement, aiming to do the most offensive things in the most offensive way, and seeming to desire collision and bloodshed as necessary political capital. This spirit, I am sorry to say, but too often controls the action and conduct of many who assume to act in the name and for the interest of the government of the United States, and who use the cloak of loyalty as a cover for their misdeeds." With regard to police troubles in New Orleans, Gen. Rousseau reports: "An act of the Legislature recently passed transferred the control of the police force of the city from the Mayor and Corporation, in whose hands it had hitherto been vested, into the hands of a Metropolitan Police Board composed of six members, three white and three colored, the Lieutenant Governor of the State presiding. This board appointed a police force of 243 negroes and 130 white men to take charge of the city of New Orleans. The community at large refused to recognize or uphold the authority of a body thus constituted. This fact alone rendered the Metropolitan Police as organized practically worthless, and placed life and property at the mercy of the worst classes in the city. At the slightest appearance of disorder the members of this police, unsupported as they were by public sentiment, stampeded, many of them throwing off their uniforms as they ran. Armed patrols of citizens then took upon themselves the guardianship of the public peace, adding another element of danger to those already existing. At another time this question might have been left to settle itself, but in the presence of threatened disturbances on all hands, when the Governor of the State had surrendered the safe keeping of the city to me, and when positive directions had been transmitted to me through the War Department to preserve the peace at all hazards, I should have fallen short of my duty had I neglected to take prompt and decisive action in the matter." He accordingly advised the Board to appoint Gen. James B. Steadman Chief of Police, which was done, and order was restored. Of the sentiments of the citizens, Gen. Rousseau says: "It is but just to say that the great body of the people of New Orleans are law abiding and entirely friendly to the government of the United States. The friendly feeling of the people generally towards the government has been evinced in many ways. The democratic clubs of the city, numbering, it is said, over 16,000 voters, and including many of the most worthy citizens and the largest property holders, formally tendered to me their services in aid of the military to preserve the peace of the city." November 25, the vote of the State was canvassed by the Governor, Secretary of State and the Judge of the Second District. Twelve parishes were thrown out, reducing the democratic majority greatly, but not changing the result, except in the Second (New Orleans) district, where the certificate as Congressman-elect was given to a republican, and a certificate for the unexpired term of a democratic representative, deceased, was given to a negro. Nov. 27, in the U. S. District Court in New Orleans the test-oath for jurors was dispensed with, and the judge ordered the oath to be administered as required before the war.

Texas. February 10-14, 1868, an election was held in which 44,689 voted for a convention, and 11,440 against it. June 15, by order of Gen. Buchanan, the convention assembled at Austin "to frame a constitution and civil government for the State." Accordingly, its first business after organization was to pass a resolution June 16, urging upon Congress the necessity of "authorizing the organization by that body of a military force in the several counties of Texas, to act in conjunction with, and under the direction of, the military commander therein." August 4, Gen. J. J. Reynolds assumed the command of Texas, which State had become by the order of July 28, the Fifth Military District. Aug. 21, the convention had been in session 85 days, and Gen. Reynolds declined to approve of an additional appropriation to pay members. Aug. 31, the convention adjourned to Dec. 7, without having adopted a constitution. The expenditures for reconstructing this State alone in two months, July and August, amounted to $425,207.09, and the remittances for this district from January to September were $2,303,100.32. In October, Gen. Reynolds issued an order forbidding the State to vote in the November election. In November, Gen. J. J. Reynolds reported the existence of armed secret organizations in the State to such an extent as to make it necessary to withdraw troops from the frontier posts for the protection of the interior of the State.

NATIONAL PLATFORMS OF 1868.

The National Democratic Convention to nominate candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency met in Tammany Hall, New York, July 4, 1868. The platform was adopted July 7. July 9, on the twenty-second ballot for a candidate for the Presidency, Horatio Seymour, of New York, received 317 votes, and was subsequently unanimously nominated. Francis P. Blair, Jr., of Missouri, was unanimously nominated as candidate for Vice-Presidency. The following is

The Democratic Platform.

The Democratic Party, in National Convention assembled, reposing its trust in the intelligence, patriotism, and discriminating justice of the people, standing upon the Constitution as the foundation and limitation of the powers of the Government, and the guarantee of the liberties of the citizen; and recognizing the questions of slavery and secession as having been settled for all time to come by the war or the voluntary action of the Southern States in Constitutional Convention assembled, and never to be renewed or reagitated, do with the return of peace demand:

First—Immediate restoration of all the States to their rights in the Union under the Constitution, and of civil government to the American people.

Second—Amnesty for all past political offences, and the regulation of the elective franchise in the States by their citizens.

Third—Payment of the public debt of the United States as rapidly as practicable; all moneys drawn from the people by taxation, except so much as is requisite for the necessities of the Government, economically administered, being honestly applied to such payment; and where the obligations of the Government do not expressly state upon their face, or the law under which they were issued does not provide, that they shall be paid in coin, they ought, in right and in justice, to be paid in the lawful money of the United States.

Fourth—Equal taxation of every species of property, according to its real value, including Government bonds and other public securities.

Fifth—One currency for the Government and the people, the laborer and the office-holder, the pensioner and the soldier, the producer and the bondholder.

Sixth—Economy in the administration of the Government; the reduction of the standing army and navy; the abolition of the Freedmen's Bureau—and all political instrumentalities designed to secure negro supremacy; simplification of the system, and discontinuance of inquisitorial modes of assessing and collecting Internal Revenue, so that the burden of taxation may be equalized and lessened; the credit of the Government and the currency made good; the repeal of all enactments for enrolling the State militia into national forces in time of peace; and a tariff for revenue upon foreign imports, and such equal taxation under the Internal Revenue laws as will afford incidental protection to domestic manufactures, and as will, without impairing the revenue, impose the least burden upon and yet promote and encourage the great industrial interests of the country.

Seventh—Reform of abuses in the administration, the expulsion of corrupt men from office, the abrogation of useless offices, the restoration of rightful authority to, and the independence of, the executive and judicial departments of the Government; the subordination of the military to the civil power, to the end that the usurpation of Congress and the despotism of the sword may cease.

Eight—Equal rights and protection for naturalized and native-born citizens at home and abroad, the assertion of American nationality, which shall command the respect of foreign powers, and furnish an example and encouragement to people struggling for national integrity, constitutional liberty and individual rights, and the maintenance of the rights of naturalized citizens against the absolute doctrine of immutable allegiance, and the claims of foreign powers to punish them for alleged crime committed beyond their jurisdiction.

In demanding these measures and reforms, we arraign the Radical party for its disregard of right and the unparalleled oppression and tyranny which have marked its career.

After the most solemn and unanimous pledge of both Houses of Congress to prosecute the war exclusively for the maintenance of the Government and the preservation of the Union under the Constitution, it has repeatedly violated that most sacred pledge under which alone was rallied that noble volunteer army which carried our flag to victory. Instead of restoring the Union it has, so far as in its power, dissolved it, and subjected ten States, in time of profound peace, to military despotism and negro supremacy. It has nullified there the right of trial by jury; it has abolished the habeas corpus, that most sacred writ of liberty; it has overthrown the freedom of speech and the press; it has substituted arbitrary seizures and arrests, and military trials and secret star-chamber inquisitions for the constitutional tribunals; it has disregarded in time of peace the right of the people to be free from searches and seizures; it has entered the post and telegraph offices, and even the private rooms of individuals, and seized their private papers and letters without any specific charge or notice or affidavit, as required by the organic law; it has converted the American Capitol into a Bastile; it has established a system of spies and official espionage to which no constitutional monarchy of Europe would now dare to resort; it would abolish the right of appeal on important constitutional questions to the supreme judicial tribunal, and threatens to curtail or destroy its original jurisdiction which is irrevocably vested by the Constitution, while the learned Chief-Justice has been subjected to the most atrocious calumnies, merely because he would not prostitute his high office to the support of the false and partisan charges preferred against the President. Its corruption and extravagance have exceeded everything known in history, and by its frauds and monopolies it has nearly doubled the burden of the debt created by the war. It has stripped the President of his constitutional power of appointment, even of his own Cabinet. Under its repeated assaults the pillars of the Government are rocking on their base, and should it succeed in November next and inaugurate its President, we will meet as a subjected and conquered people amid the ruins of liberty and the scattered fragments of the Constitution.

And we do declare and resolve, that ever since the people of the United States threw off all subjection to the British Crown the privilege and trust of suffrage have belonged to the several States, and have been granted, regulated, and controlled exclusively by the political power of each State respectively, and that any attempt by Congress, on any pretext whatever, to deprive any State of this right, or interfere with its exercise, is a flagrant usurpation of power which can find no warrant in the Constitution, and if sanctioned by the people will subvert our form of government, and can only end in a single centralized and consolidated government, in which the separate existence of the States will be entirely absorbed and an unqualified despotism be established in place of a Federal Union of coequal States.

And that we regard the Reconstruction acts (so-called) of Congress, as such, as usurpations, and unconstitutional, revolutionary and void.

That our soldiers and sailors who carried the flag of our country to victory against a most gallant and determined foe must ever be gratefully remembered, and all the guarantees given in their favor must be faithfully carried into execution.

That the public lands should be distributed as widely as possible among the people, and should be disposed of either under the pre-emption of homestead lands, or sold in reasonable quantities, and to none but actual occupants, at the minimum price established by the Government. When grants of public lands may be allowed, necessary for the encouragement of important public improvements, the proceeds of the sale of such lands, and not the lands themselves, should be applied.

That the President of the United States—Andrew Johnson—in exercising the power of his high office in resisting the aggressions of Congress upon the constitutional rights of the States and the People, is entitled to the gratitude of the whole American people; and in behalf of the Democratic party we tender him our thanks for his patriotic efforts in that regard.

Upon this Platform the Democratic party appeal to every patriot, including the conservative element and all who desire to support the Constitution and restore the Union, forgetting all past differences of opinion, to unite with us in the present great struggle for the liberties of the people, and that to all such, to whatever party they may have heretofore belonged, we extend the right hand of fellowship, and hail all such co-operating with us as friends and brethren.

Horatio Seymour's Letter of Acceptance.

UTICA, August 4.

GENTLEMEN:

When, in the City of New York, on the 11th of July, in the presence of a vast multitude, on behalf of the National Democratic Convention, you tendered to me its unanimous nomination as its candidate for the office of President of the United States, I stated that I had no words adequate to express my gratitude for the good will and kindness which that body had shown to me. Its nomination was unsought and unexpected. It was my ambition to take an active part, from which I am now excluded, in the great struggle going on for the restoration of good government, of peace and prosperity to our country. But I have been caught up by the whelming tide which is bearing us on to a great political change, and I find myself unable to resist its pressure. You have also given me a copy of the resolutions put forth by the Convention, showing its position upon all the great questions which now agitate the country. As the presiding officer of that Convention, I am familiar with their scope and import; as one of its members, I am a party to their terms. They are in accord with my views, and I stand upon them in a contest upon which we are now entering, and shall strive to carry them out in future, wherever I may be placed, in political or private life.

I then stated that I would send you these words of acceptance in a letter, as is the customary form. I see no reason, upon reflection, to change or qualify the terms of my approval of the resolutions of the Convention.

I have delayed the mere formal act of communicating to you in writing what I thus publicly said, for the purpose of seeing what light the action of Congress would throw upon the interests of the country. Its acts since the adjournment of the Convention show an alarm lest a change of political power will give to the people what they ought to have—a clear statement of what has been done with the money drawn from them during the past eight years. Thoughtful men feel that there have been wrongs in the financial management which have been kept from the public knowledge. The Congressional party has not only allied itself with military power, which is to be brought to bear directly upon the elections in many States, but it also holds itself in perpetual session, with the avowed purpose of making such laws as it shall see fit, in view of the elections which will take place within a few weeks. It did not, therefore, adjourn, but took a recess, to meet again if its partisan interests shall demand its re-assembling. Never before in the history of our country has Congress thus taken a menacing attitude towards its electors. Under its influence some of the States organized by its agents are proposing to deprive the people of the right to vote for Presidential electors, and the first bold steps are taken to destroy the rights of suffrage. It is not strange, therefore, that thoughtful men see in such action the proof that there is with those who shape the policy of the Republican party, motives stronger and deeper than the mere wish to hold political power; that there is a dread of some exposure which drives them on to acts so desperate and impolitic.

Many of the ablest leaders and journals of the Republican party have openly deplored the violence of Congressional action, and its tendency to keep up discord in our country. The great interests of our Union demand peace, order, and a return to those industrial pursuits without which we cannot maintain the faith or honor of our Government. The minds of business men are perplexed by uncertainties. The hours of toil of our laborers are lengthened by the costs of living made by the direct and indirect exactions of Government. Our people are harassed by the heavy and frequent demands of the tax-gatherer. Without distinction of party there is a strong feeling in favor of that line of action which shall restore order and confidence, and shall lift off the burdens which now hinder and vex the industry of the country. Yet at this moment those in power have thrown into the Senate Chamber and Congressional Hall new elements of discord and violence. Men have been admitted as Representatives of some of the Southern States, with the declaration upon their lips that they cannot live in the States they claim to represent without military protection. These men are to make laws for the North as well as the South. These men, who a few days since were seeking as suppliants that Congress would give them power within their respective States, are to-day the masters and controllers of the actions of those bodies. Entering them with minds filled with passions, their first demands have been that Congress shall look upon the States from which they come as in conditions of civil war; that the majority of their populations, embracing their intelligence, shall be treated as public enemies; that military forces shall be kept up at the cost of the people of the North, and that there shall be no peace and order at the South save that which is made by arbitrary power. Every intelligent man knows that these men owe their seats in Congress to the disorder in the South; every man knows that they not only owe their present positions to disorder, but that every motive springing from the love of power, of gain, or a desire for vengeance, prompts them to keep the South in anarchy. While that exists, they are independent of the wills or wishes of their fellow-citizens. While confusion reigns they are the dispensers of the profits and the honors which grow out of the government of mere force. These men are now placed in positions where they cannot merely urge their views of policy, but where they can enforce them. When others shall be admitted in this manner from the remaining Southern States, although they will have in truth no constituents, they will have more power in the Senate than a majority of people of this Union living in nine of the great States. In vain the wisest members of the Republican party protested against the policy that led to this result. While the chiefs of the late rebellion have submitted to the results of the war, and are now quietly engaged in useful pursuits for the support of themselves and their families, and are trying by the force of their example to lead back the people of the South to order and industry, not only essential to their well being, but to the greatness and prosperity of our common country, we see that those who, without ability or influence, have been thrown by the agitations of civil convulsion into positions of honor and profit, are striving to keep alive the passions to which they owe their elevation. And they clamorously insist that they are the only friends of our Union—a Union that can only have a sure foundation in fraternal regard and a common desire to promote the peace, the order, and the happiness of all sections of our land.

Events in Congress since the adjournment of the Convention have vastly increased the importance of a political victory by those who are seeking to bring back economy, simplicity, and justice in the administration of our national affairs. Many Republicans have heretofore clung to their party who have regretted the extremes of violence to which it has run. They have cherished a faith that while the action of their political friends has been mistaken, their motives have been good. They must now see that the Republican party is in that condition that it cannot carry out a wise and peaceful policy, whatever its motives may be. It is a misfortune, not only to a country, but to a governing party itself, when its action is unchecked by any form of opposition. It has been the misfortune of the Republican party that the events of the past few years have given it so much power that it has been able to shackle the Executive, to trammel the Judiciary, and to carry out the views of the most unwise and violent of its members. When this state of things exists in any party, it has ever been found that the sober judgments of its ablest leaders do not control. There is hardly an able man who has helped to build up the Republican organization, who has not, within the past three years, warned it against its excesses, who has not been borne down and forced to give up his convictions of what the country called for; or, if too patriotic to do this, who has not been driven from its ranks. If this has been the case heretofore, what will be its action now with this new infusion of men who, without a decent respect for the views of those who had just given them their positions, begin their legislative career with calls for arms, with demands that their States shall be regarded as in a condition of civil war, and with a declaration that they are ready and anxious to degrade the President of the United States, whenever they can persuade or force Congress to bring forward new articles of impeachment.

The Republican party, as well as we, are interested in putting some check upon this violence. It must be clear to every thinking man that a division of political power tends to check the violence of party action and to assure the peace and good order of society. The election of a Democratic Executive, and a majority of Democratic members to the House of Representatives would not give to that party organization the power to make sudden and violent changes, but it would serve to check those extreme measures which have been deplored by the best men of both political organizations. The result would most certainly lead to that peaceful restoration of the Union and re-establishment of fraternal relationship which the country desires. I am sure that the best men of the Republican party deplore as deeply as I do the spirit of violence shown by those recently admitted to seats in Congress from the South. The condition of civil war which they contemplate must be abhorrent to every right thinking man.

I have no mere personal wishes which mislead my judgment in regard to the pending election. No man who has weighed and measured the duties of the office of President of the United States, can fail to be impressed with the cares and toils of him who is to meet its demands. It is not merely to float with popular currents, without a policy or a purpose. On the contrary, while our Constitution gives just weight to the public will, its distinguishing feature is that it seeks to protect the rights of minorities. Its greatest glory is that it puts restraints upon power. It gives force and form to those maxims and principles of civil liberty for which the martyrs of freedom have struggled through ages. It declares the right of the people: "To be secure in their persons, houses, and papers against unreasonable searches and seizures. That Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people to petition for the redress of grievances. It secures the right of a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury."

No man can rightfully enter upon the duties of the Presidential office unless he is not only willing to carry out the wishes of the people, expressed in a constitutional way, but is also prepared to stand up for the rights of minorities. He must be ready to uphold the free exercise of religion. He must denounce measures which would wrong personal or home rights, or the religious conscience of the humblest citizen of the land. He must maintain, without distinction of creed or nationality, all the privileges of American citizenship.

The experience of every public man who has been faithful to his trust teaches him that no one can do the duties of the office of President unless he is ready not only to undergo the falsehoods and abuse of the bad, but to suffer from the censure of the good who are misled by prejudices and misrepresentations. There are no attractions in such positions, which deceive my judgment, when I say that a great change is going on in the public mind. The mass of the Republican party are more thoughtful, temperate, and just than they were during the excitements which attended the progress and close of the civil war. As the energy of the Democratic party springs from their devotion to their cause and not to their candidates, I may with propriety speak of the fact that never in the political history of our country has the action of any like body been hailed with such universal and widespread enthusiasm as that which has been shown in relation to the position of the National Democratic Convention. With this the candidates had nothing to do. Had any others of those named been selected, this spirit would have been, perhaps, more marked. The zeal and energy of the conservative masses spring from a desire to make a change of political policy, and from the confidence that they can carry out their policy.

In this faith they are strengthened by the co-operation of the great body of those who served in the Union army and navy during the war. Having given nearly sixteen thousand commissions to the officers of that army, I know their views and wishes. They demand the Union for which they fought. The largest meeting of these gallant soldiers which ever assembled was held in New York, and indorsed the action of the National Convention. In words instinct with meaning, they called upon the Government to stop in its policy of hate, discord and disunion, and in tones of fervid eloquence they demanded the restoration of the rights and liberties of the American people.

When there is such accord between those who proved themselves brave and self-sacrificing in war, and those who are thoughtful and patriotic in council, I cannot doubt we shall gain a political triumph which will restore our Union, bring back peace and prosperity to our land, and will give us once more the blessings of a wise, economical and honest Government.

I am, Gentlemen, truly yours, &c.,

HORATIO SEYMOUR.

To Gen. G. W. Morgan, and others, Committee, &., &c.

The Republican Platform.

The National Republican Convention met at Chicago May 20, assumed the name of "The National Union Republican Party," and nominated General U. S. Grant, on the first ballot, as candidate for President, and Schuyler Colfax, of Indiana, on the fifth ballot, as candidate for Vice-President. May 21, the Convention adopted the following platform:

I. We congratulate the country on the assured success of the reconstruction policy of Congress, as evinced by the adoption, in the majority of States lately in rebellion, of constitutions securing equal civil and political rights to all; and it is the duty of the Government to sustain those institutions and to prevent the people of such States from being readmitted to a state of anarchy.

II. The guaranty by Congress of equal suffrage to all loyal men at the South was demanded by every consideration of public safety, of gratitude, and of justice, and must be maintained; while the question of suffrage in all the loyal States properly belongs to the people of those States.

III. We denounce all forms of repudiation as a national crime; and the national honor requires the payment of the public indebtedness in the uttermost good faith to all creditors at home and abroad, not only according to the letter but the spirit of the laws under which it was contracted.

IV. It is due to the labor of the nation that taxation should be equalized and reduced as rapidly as the national faith will permit.

V. The national debt, contracted as it has been for the preservation of the Union for all time to come, should be extended over a fair period for redemption; and it is the duty of Congress to reduce the rate of interest thereon whenever it can be honestly done.

VI. That the best policy to diminish our burden of debt is to so improve our credit that capitalists will seek to loan us money at lower rates of interest than we now pay, and must continue to pay so long as repudiation, partial or total, open or covert, is threatened or suspected.

VII. The Government of the United States should be administered with the strictest economy, and the corruptions which have been so shamefully nursed and fostered by Andrew Johnson call loudly for radical reform.

VIII. We profoundly deplore the untimely and tragic death of Abraham Lincoln, and regret the accession to the Presidency of Andrew Johnson, who has acted treacherously to the people who elected him and the cause he was pledged to support; who has usurped high legislative and judicial functions; who has refused to execute the laws; who has used his high office to induce other officers to ignore and violate the laws; who has employed his executive powers to render insecure the property, the peace, liberty, and life of the citizen; who has abused the pardoning power; who has denounced the National Legislature as unconstitutional; who has persistently and corruptly resisted, by every means in his power, every proper attempt at the reconstruction of the States lately in rebellion; who has perverted the public patronage into an engine of wholesale corruption; and who has been justly impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors, and properly pronounced guilty thereof by the votes of thirty-five Senators.

IX. The doctrine of Great Britain and other European powers, that because a man is once a subject he is always so, must be resisted at every hazard by the United States as a relic of feudal times, not authorized by the laws of nations, and at war with our national honor and independence. Naturalized citizens are entitled to protection in all their rights of citizenship, as though they were native-born; and no citizen of the United States, native or naturalized, must be liable to arrest and imprisonment by any foreign power for acts done or words spoken in this country: and if so arrested and imprisoned, it is the duty of the Government to interfere in his behalf.

X. Of all who were faithful in the trials of the late war, there were none entitled to more especial honor than the brave soldiers and seamen who endured the hardships of campaign and cruise, and imperilled their lives in the service of the country; the bounties and pensions provided by the laws for these brave defenders of the nation are obligations never to be forgotten; the widows and orphans of the gallant dead are the wards of the people—a sacred legacy, bequeathed to the nation's protecting care.

XI. Foreign immigration, which in the past has added so much to the wealth, development, and resources and increase of power to this Republic, the asylum of the oppressed of all nations, should be fostered and encouraged by a liberal and just policy.

XII. This Convention declares itself in sympathy with all oppressed peoples struggling for their rights.

On motion of Carl Schurz, the following were added:

Resolved, That we highly commend the spirit of magnanimity and forbearance with which men who have served in the rebellion—but who now frankly and honestly co-operate with us in restoring the peace of the country, and reconstructing the Southern State governments upon the basis of Impartial Justice and Equal Rights, are received back into the communion of the loyal people; and we favor the removal of the disqualifications and restrictions imposed upon the late rebels in the same measure as their spirit of loyalty will direct, and as may be consistent with the safety of the loyal people.

Resolved, That we recognize the great principles laid down in the immortal Declaration of Independence as the true foundation of Democratic government; and we hail with gladness every effort toward making these principles a living reality on every inch of American soil.

General Grant's Letter of Acceptance.

WASHINGTON, June 1.

To J. R. Hawley, President of the National Union Republican Convention:

In formally accepting the nomination of the National Union Republican Convention of the 21st of May, it seems proper that some statement of views beyond the mere acceptance of the nomination should be expressed.

The proceedings of the Convention were marked with unusual moderation and patriotism, and I believe express the feelings of the great mass of those who sustained the country through its recent trials. If elected to the office of President of the United States, it shall be my endeavor to administer all the laws in good faith, with economy, and with a view of giving peace, quiet, and protection everywhere.

In times like the present it is impossible, or at least eminently improper, to lay down a policy to be adhered to, right or wrong, through an administration of four years. New political issues not foreseen are constantly arising to the views of the public, and old ones are constantly changing, and a purely administrative officer should be left free to execute the will of the people. I always have respected that will, and always shall. Peace and universal prosperity is its sequence, and with economy of administration, will lighten the burden of taxation, while it constantly reduces the national debt. Let us have peace.

With great respect,

Your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT.

The Abyssinian War.

The Abyssinian difficulty in which England was involved at the commencement of last year terminated in the total defeat and death of King Theodorus. The facts which led to the rupture of amicable relations between the King of Abyssinia and the British Government are as follows: In 1864 Theodorus imprisoned several British subjects for commenting too freely on his conduct, and conspiring, as he asserted, with his enemies, the Turks. It is probable that the real cause of this determination was a desire to keep skilled European workmen in his dominions In 1865 Captain Cameron, the British Consul at Massowah, was directed to visit the King to obtain the release of the prisoners. This official was detained a prisoner also. In 1866 Mr. Rassam, well known in connection with Mr. Layard's explorations of Nineveh, was sent on an embassy to procure in return for presents the release of the Consul and the other detenus. He was compelled to share their prison. It was alleged that the reason of these later outrages was the contemptuous refusal by Queen Victoria of the King's offer of marriage. This is, probably, legendary. At the close of 1867 the Derby Government fitted out an expedition, composed of several regiments, on service in India, and commanded by Sir Robert Napier, a distinguished officer of engineers. Landing in Abyssinia in December, the army reached the neighborhood of Magdala, Theodorus' capital, an almost inaccessible stronghold, in April, 1868. April 10, the Abyssinian forces were completely fouted; the following day the King released his captives, and made overtures, which were rejected. April 13th Magdala was taken by storm, and Theodorus died by his own hand. His son was brought captive to England to be educated. Sir Robert Napier, in recognition of his services, was created Lord Napier of Magdala and Carynton, received a pension of £2000 for two lives, was thanked by Parliament, and was received everywhere with distinguished honors.

The Japanese Revolution.

The close of 1867 was marked by an important event in the history of Japan. The Tycoon resigned the supreme power to the Mikado and a Council of Daimios—the Mikado retaining the Tycoon temporarily at the head of affairs. This act was followed by the inauguration of a new policy. The captive Christians were released, and the ports of Hiogo and Osaka opened to the foreign powers. This latter measure produced intense dissatisfaction among large numbers of the Japanese. It eventually gave rise to a bloody civil war. The Young Mikado was seized by Satsuma and other princes; the late Shagoon Stots Bashi, fled to Osaka and invoked the aid of the foreign Ministers. These refused to take part in the internal affairs of the country. Several battles were fought near Yeddo, and in the most important the Tycoon was defeated. The government pledged itself to observe the treaty with the foreign powers. Several outrages were perpetrated on foreigners. Eventually the Tycoon Stots Bashi retired from all share in the government, and the Mikado promised to make ample reparation for the injuries to foreigners. The conditions imposed by the Mikado on the Tycoon were very humiliating.

The Spanish Revolution.

During the year 1868 the troubled condition of Spain reached its highest point, culminating in a successful revolution against the government of Isabella. So long as Narvaez lived and held the reins of government the efforts of General Prim and the other revolutionary leaders were futile.. Narvaez having died in the latter part of April, Gonzalez Brabo was called to the head of affairs. The new Minister was incompetent to preserve peace or to prevent conspiracies. The banishment of several prominent military leaders to the Canaries and the escape of others to Paris and London were followed by an invitation to the Duke and Duchess Montpensier to retire from the Kingdom. The Cortes was dismissed in May. Changes in the Cabinet during the month of June failed to produce satisfaction amongst the people. The army was disgusted at the banishment of its favorite leaders; the navy was equally dissatisfied, its wages being long over due. While the Queen was absent in France on a visit to the Emperor, the revolution carefully fomented by agents of the absent and exiled generals broke out. Admiral Topete, September 17, called on the town of Cadiz to surrender to the people, and was supported in his demand by a portion of the garrison; after some hesitation the Governor yielded. General Ezquierdo headed the movement in Seville; and Alusia was in a blaze. Baldrich returning from Paris, penetrated into Catalonia; Armentes entered Aragon. The Ministry saw the danger. Brabo resigned, and Concha was selected in his place. Martial law was declared in Madrid: the whole country was in arms. Isabella attempted to return to her capital, but was unsuccessful. The revolutionists occupied Santander. Royalist generals sent against them joined them. Carthagena was bombarded. Concha and his brother resigned their positions. Cheste was summoned to form a Ministry. The Queen then was anxious to abdicate in favor of her eldest son, but compromises were refused. The revolutionists were victorious in the pitched battle of Alcolea, after which the Queen crossed the French frontier. From a French chateau she protested against the revolution. Serrano entered Madrid in triumph October 3. October 7 a Provisional Government had been formed, in which Serrano and Prim were honorary Presidents; Aguirre, Acting President, Ribero and Vigo Armigo, Vice-Presidents; Figuerola, Minister of Finance. A few days subsequently Minister Hale, by direction of Secretary Seward, recognized the new government. The Captain-General of Cuba, Lersundi, published a proclamation stating that he held Cuba for Spain irrespective of its government. In consequence he endeavored to suppress a formidable insurrection, which had for its object the independence of the "ever-faithful isle." In the middle of October the Provisional Government addressed the European powers claiming recognition. Up to the date of our going to press the form of government to be adopted had not been decided. It was rumored that General Prim sought to be elected King, but this has been denied. A serious counter revolution against the new government was attempted in Cadiz, but by the interposition of the American Consul, Mr. Farrell, the revolutionists were induced to submit.

Other Revolutions.

In addition to the Spanish and Japanese revolutions, 1868 was memorable for revolutions in Hayti, Cuba, New Grenada, Uruguay, Southern Italy, and Muscat. None of these except that in Muscat were productive of important results. The Wahahees, a religious sect, succeeded in deposing the Imaun of Muscat.

The War in Paraguay.

During the year 1868 the war which the Brazilians and their allies waged against the Republic of Paraguay was continued with varying success. Cholera, losses in the field, and the determined resistance of Marshal Lopez, in command of the Paraguayans, had weakened the Brazilian forces considerably. Efforts were made by a strong party in the Argentine Republics, as well as in Brazil, to procure a peace. These were unsuccessful, and the war has been prosecuted with much energy. Humaita, the well known fortress of the Paraguayans, believed to be impregnable, was at last captured, July 16; its capitulation had been announced frequently, but without any foundation. The Paraguayans then retired behind the lines of the Tebicuary, and at the last account received from the scene of war, were strongly entrenched in the neighborhood of Asuncion, their capital.

The Washburn-Lopez Difficulty.

Growing out of the Paraguayan war serious complications have arisen between the Government of the United States and that of Marshal Lopez. Our Minister to Paraguay, Mr. Washburn, occupying a hotel within the military post of Asuncion, received into it numerous foreigners in the capacity of friends on a visit, or servants, or as attaches of the American Embassy. Many of these were inimical to the Paraguayan Government, and, as it is said by the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Senor Benitez, conspirators against Marshal Lopez. After a long correspondence between Benitez and Washburn, the latter yielded to the demand that these persons should be requested to leave the Embassy. Minister Washburn, however, refused to dismiss Porter C. Bliss, an American, and Dr. Masterman, an Englishman, whom he claimed were attaches of the Embassy. The correspondence then assumed a most disreputable character. Benitez charged our Minister with conspiring with Masterman, Bliss, the late Paraguayan Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the Marshal de Caxias, commander of the Brazilian forces, against the life of Lopez and the liberties of Paraguay. In answer to this serious charge, Minister Washburn continued writing long answers "for the purpose of gaining time till assistance would come." This at last arrived, Captain Kirkland, of the United States steamer Wasp, having passed the Brazilian blockading squadron. While going from his hotel in Asuncion to the steamer which was to bring him on board the American vessel, Bliss and Masterman were dragged from the Minister's side by Lopez' orders, and detained. Mr. Washburn has published several letters written to exculpate himself from many of the disgraceful imputations suggested by his conduct. General Webb, U. S. Minister to Brazil, has published a letter exonerating Washburn from many of the charges made against him. Much indignation has been felt in this country against Marshal Lopez for his alleged outrage; and Mr. Washburn's apparent pusillanimity has been greatly blamed. Instructions have been forwarded from the Department of State to General M'Mahon, our recently appointed Minister to Paraguay, to investigate the whole matter; a fleet, under Admiral Davis, has been ordered to support the national honor in Paraguay.

Negro Suffrage in 1868.

In April, 1868, Michigan voted on a proposed new constitution, admitting negro suffrage, with the following result: For new constitution, 71,733; against new constitution, 110,582; majority against, 38,849. In November, Minnesota, Missouri and Iowa voted on amendments to their respective constitutions to admit negro suffrage, thus: Minnesota, for, 39,322; against, 29,906; majority for, 9,416; Missouri, for, 55,926; against, 78,504; majority against, 22,579. A proposition to so amend the State Constitution as to permit negro suffrage, was also submitted in Iowa and adopted, official majority not known. Propositions are pending in Congress to provide for the submission of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to admit negro suffrage in all the States.

The Œcumenical Council.

The Pope has issued letters Apostolic, summoning the Hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church to assemble in St. Peters' Basilica, December 8, 1869, the feast of the Immaculate Conception. The Council has been summoned for the purpose of discussing the interests of Catholicity, and of endeavoring to unite in communion with the See of Peter the non-Catholic bodies. For this purpose, his Holiness issued September 13, 1868, a letter of invitation to the members of the Greek and Protestant Churches to assist at the Œcumenical Council. It is understood that the recognized heads of these churches have declined to accept the invitation, owing to the wording of the Papal letter. It is also understood that notwithstanding their determination, large numbers have signified their intention of co-operating with the Roman Church in its endeavor to promote reunion.

GROWTH OF CEREALS IN 1868.

We subjoin such reports of the growth of cereals in 1868, as had reached the Agricultural Bureau of the Federal Government in time for the October report. They are not so complete as we could wish, but delay in the publication of the November reports prevents our availing ourselves of them.

Wheat.—The full promise of the early summer has not been realized in the wheat harvest. The increase of area over that of last year, in its effect upon the aggregate production, is nearly neutralized by a small diminution in some of the principal wheat-growing States, in the yield per acre; so that the increase in the total quantity, as shown by our October returns, is scarcely more than three per cent., and that is obtained mainly from the Pacific coast. The progress of wheat culture westward is somewhat remarkable: the territory between the Mississippi river and the Pacific ocean, which in 1859 yielded about 25,000,000 of bushels, harvested about 65,000,000; while the country east of the Mississippi, with its accession of population and wide distribution of agricultural implements has made no increase, as a whole a few of the western States barely making up the deficiency suffered in Virginia and Kentucky It is a remarkable fact that a region which nine years ago produced only one-seventh of the wheat in the country, now supplies nearly one-third of it

The averages for October appear to show a decrease in production in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Texas, the latter having only half a crop The other States indicate an increase, in most of those east of the Mississippi, very slight in Minnesota, 13 per cent. in Iowa, 6; in Missouri, 8; in Nebraska, 13, in Kansas, 23; and in California, 25 per cent.

Many places in different parts of the country especially in Maryland and Wisconsin, report a disappointment in the yield of grain in threshing. The disappointment, however is sometimes in the other direction. The amount of old wheat on hand is somewhat less than usual throughout the country with the exception of the cotton States, which have a higher average than last year. This remark will not apply to Texas, where the granaries are uniformly empty. The quantity left over in Wisconsin is relatively somewhat lower than in the neighboring States

Oats.—This crop is light in the eastern, middle, and southern Atlantic States; is not a full average in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Iowa; in the other States the product is above the average, the largest increase being 21 per cent. in Nebraska. In Wisconsin the deficiency is 9 per cent.

Rye, in most of the States, is marked by figures very similar to those which show the relative product of oats.

Barley.—The barley crop is somewhat deficient in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and in most of the Atlantic States. It will scarcely make so large an aggregate in bushels as last year.

Corn.—Considerable injury from frost is reported in northern Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and more northern latitudes. In some portions of Iowa an estimate of two-fifths of soft corn is made. From southern Indiana, southern Ohio, west Virginia, and Pennsylvania, come complaints of immaturity in consequence of wet weather, and a few accounts of injury from drought are received. No general or very severe droughts have been reported. The high temperature of July was favorable to the growth of corn, but the unusual coolness of the later summer gave a sudden and injurious check at the critical period of earing, resulting in late ripening, smut, and other evidences of abnormal conditions. Yet the acreage is undeniably large in most of the States, and nowhere is there very serious failure. The total product will be, therefore, not what was hoped in the early season, or what is needed for a country with a rapidly increasing population, but a somewhat larger quantity than last year, which was a season peculiarly adverse to corn production. A good crop should exceed one thousand millions of bushels. Last year's production was little more than three-fourths of that quantity, and the present may exceed that figure by 10 or 15 per cent.

Peas and Beans will be nearly an average crop

Buckwheat is very generally deficient; Connecticut New Jersey Minnesota, California, and some of the southern States furnish favorable exceptions. It was injured by early frosts in high latitudes.

Potatoes.—In southern New England, New Jersey, Delaware, the Gulf States and California, potatoes are reported a full average crop, with a deficiency of 10 per cent. in New York and Pennsylvania, from 3 to 7 per cent. in the southern Atlantic States and Tennessee, 20 in Illinois, 10 in Iowa, 11 in Indiana, 15 in Ohio, 16 in Michigan, and a greater or less reduction in other western States.

The estimate of the crops in the United States, for the year 1868, is as follows:—

		Total yield, United States.
Indian Corn	bushels	763,320,000
Wheat	"	212,441,400
Rye	"	23,184,000

Buckwheat	"	21,359,000
Tobacco	lbs.	97,783,000

The total value of the crops in the United States, including cotton and the products above mentioned, is $2,027,432,231.

RATES OF FOREIGN POSTAGE.

a.—When the letter a is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in each case is 12 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every 7½ grammes (¼ oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic Sea postage (which in each case is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 2 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases the postage is for each newspaper, without regard to its weight, when sent in British mail.

The charge on newspapers to Belgium, The Netherlands, the North German Union, or via the North German Union to countries beyond, and to Italy and Switzerland, increases a single rate for every 4 ounces of weight.

Letters, if unpaid, or insufficiently paid, are subject to a fine on delivery, in addition to the deficient postage. Other matter insufficiently paid is also forwarded (but not if wholly unpaid), subject to a similar fine, when addressed to Germany, Austria, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, or Italy; but no other matter than letters will be forwarded to Great Britain or Ireland, unless fully prepaid.

The Asterisk (*) indicates that in cases where it is prefixed, unless the letter be registered, prepayment is optional; in all other cases prepayment is required.

STEINWAY & SONS,

MANUFACTURERS OF

Grand, Square, & Upright Piano-Fortes.

CROWNING TRIUMPHS!

THE FIRST

GRAND GOLD MEDAL OF HONOR.

Exposition Universelle, Paris, 1867.

The Grand Testimonial Medal and Honorary Membership from the Société des Beaux Arts, Paris, 1867.

The First Prize Medal at the International Exhibition, London, 1862.

Grand Honorary Gold Medal of Merit from His Majesty King Charles XV. of Sweden and Norway.

Academical Honors have been bestowed upon Messrs. THEODORE and WILLIAM STEINWAY, for their valuable inventions and manifold improvements in Pianos, by the Royal Academies of Sciences and Arts of Berlin and Stockholm.

Thirty-five First Premiums,

From 1855 to 1862, inclusive, since which time STEINWAY & SONS have not entered their Piano-fortes at any Local Fair in the United States.

Extract from the Official Report of the International Jury, (published by the Imperial Commission, 1868,) comparing the relative merits of the Pianos of the two great American Exhibitors:

"The Pianos of Messrs. STEINWAY & SONS are equally endowed with the splendid sonority of their competitor; they also possess that seizing largeness and volume of tone, hitherto unknown, which fills the greatest space. Brilliant in the treble, singing in the middle, and formidable in the bass; this sonority acts with irresistible power on the organs of hearing. In regard to expression, delicate shading, variety of accentuation, the instruments of Messrs. STEINWAY have over those of their American competitor an advantage which cannot be contested. The blow of the hammer is heard much less, and the Pianist feels under his hands an action pliant and easy, which permits him at will to be powerful or light, vehement and graceful. These pianos are at the same time the instrument of the virtuoso who wishes to astonish by the eclat of his execution, and of the artist who applies his talent to the music of thought and sentiment, bequeathed to us by the illustrious masters; in one word, they are at the same time the pianos for the concert room and the parlor, possessing an unexceptionable sonority."

THE NEW YORK WORLD,

DAILY, SEMI-WEEKLY, WEEKLY.

HOW OTHERS SEE IT.

THE WORLD.—"The New York WORLD, though not in all respects fulfilling our ideas of what a Democratic journal should be, is nevertheless entitled to a large share in the gratitude and support of the Democracy of the country, and especially of the people of the South. It is a power in the land, and all that power has been put forth in defense of the Southern people against the aggressions and oppression of Jacobinism. If you want a metropolitan organ, send for THE WORLD for 1869; and if you want a hand-book, send for the WORLD ALMANAC for 1869, which costs but 20 cents a copy."—Yeoman, Frankfort, Ky.

"Our Democratic readers, and Radicals, too, who want to know what is going on in the great commercial metropolis of the country, in other business centers, in political circles, and in the world at large, are recommended, after paying for the Argus, to subscribe for the New York WORLD. Its editorials cover a wide range, its news columns are filled to repletion, its telegrams are from every quarter of the earth, and its correspondence, special and regular, outrivals any cotemporary. An eight page paper—the Daily is frequently enlarged to 12 and 16 pages, and each number is a quarto volume in itself. The Weekly gives a large amount of reading matter, including the proceedings of the Farmers' Club, full Market Reports, entertaining reading for the family, religious, literary, scientific, &c., and a full news digest. Politically, the WORLD is sound, as those who have been so ready to denounce it will one of these days be obliged to confess, while as a newspaper it has no equal. No other paper gives so full reports of public meetings, so much general matter, or so able editorials. Now is the time to subscribe for 1869."—Argus, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

"THE NEW YORK WORLD is the best edited newspaper in the United States. The best writing talent in New York City is employed, as men of every party are compelled to acknowledge. While the WORLD is the leading Democratic paper of the nation, it is the most useful publication in all the eastern cities, for the amount of reading matter and reliable reports of everything transpiring of importance in every section of the country. There is no event in this country or in all Europe, which escapes the columns of the WORLD. And the great value is upon the accuracy and correctness of what is represented. There is nothing to take back or correct. All business men, all reading men, and especially Democrats, should subscribe for the WORLD."—Marquette Express, Montello, Wis.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.—"This able advocate of 'Progressive Democracy' comes regularly to our table, and is ever welcome. It is pleasant to take up an independent, outspoken and fearless journal, that is in these days neither sordid nor craven. The WORLD is conducted by MANTON MARBLE, Esq., and a staff of as able editors and reporters as probably ever associated together in any sanctum. Democrats who want a paper, send for it."—Salt Lake Daily Telegraph.

"THE WORLD, which has become the leading newspaper in New York, is now engaged in showing up the dishonest grocers in that city. THE WORLD deserves great credit for its boldness in this matter."—Easton (Pa.) News.

"The New York WORLD is generally conceded to be the best and ablest daily newspaper published."—Corning (N. Y.) Democrat.

"What the Thunderer, the London Times, has, during so many years, been to the English public, the New York WORLD, by its present splendid editorial management, by its well-digested, statesmanlike and attractive editorial articles, and by its uniform fairness in discussion, has become to the United States. Making use of argument, solid and logical argument, instead of rhotomontade, it constantly foils the efforts of the Radicals to mislead people who are guided by reason rather than by passion. Never before have the Democratic party known such a dignified advocate of the principles which have made our country what it was before the cursed civil war and the funguses of Radical legislators crippled it. We marvel at its beautiful specimens of logic and clearly-stated propositions which appear morning after morning—a logic which never fails to scatter to the four winds the sophistries of Tribune, Herald, Times and Post. Yet Democrats we sometimes see buying the Herald and reading the fusty, musty nonsense of quirks and quibbles which the 'miserable old man,' Bennett, spreads upon his pages. We protest against this, and ask such men to do their duty. They think it a political crime to encourage the Tribune in its disunion teachings, or to waste their time over the juggling of the Times, while at the same time they will buy and read a far worse newspaper than either, and why? Not for its superior news items, for THE WORLD has them all; not for any wisdom it teaches, for it has none; nor for its ability, for more namby-pamby stuff never filled the columns of a newspaper than the Herald's editorials. Let such men think of the wrong they are doing. We have often urged a more cordial and unwavering support of Democratic newspapers, and ask first for a more general support of local journals; but let no one fail to read the New York WORLD. We welcome it as we do our food, for its perusal is as strengthening to the mind as food is to the body. In fine, it exhibits constantly a polished style, sound sense, excellent judgment, and news items only limited by facts. Every Democrat ought to be proud of such a journal, and show his appreciation by taking it himself and helping to circulate it through the voting masses."—Union County Herald, Elizabeth, N. J.

VOTE FOR PRESIDENT.

The official announcement of the vote for President has not at this date (Jan'y 5, 1869) been made except so far as to give the total vote of the State as follows:

STATE OFFICERS.—Governor, Powell Clayton; Lieut.-Governor, James A. Johnson.

For Grant	22153
For Seymour	19995
Grant's majority	2158

This result was obtained by disfranchising eleven counties by declaring martial law in them and rejecting the votes of two or three others. It is believed that Seymour obtained a majority of the honest vote polled.

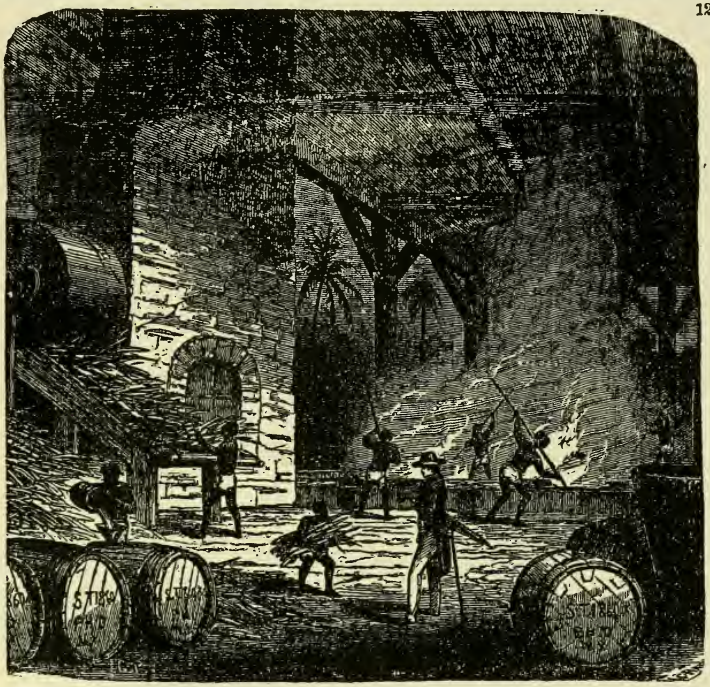
35, Park Row, New York.



Many years ago, the writer of these lines and an invalid physician, while visiting the Island of St. Croix for their health, experienced and witnessed many surprising and beneficial effects of the Rum there produced upon many of the invalids who were (like ourselves) seeking health; and, upon inquiry and investigation, obtained a full history of its medicinal virtues. He was delighted and surprised, and after his own recovery, which soon occurred, determined to make it the basis of a tonic and restorative medicine, with other ingredients, consisting of Calisaya, Cascarilla, and other barks, which he had obtained in his extensive travels in South America and elsewhere.

The result of his labors was a glorious success for himself and suffering humanity, for the celebrated PLANTATION BITTERS was thus made known to the world. PLANTATION BITTERS being an article of real merit, founded upon new principles, and relying wholly upon the vegetable world for its medicinal effects, worked a rapid revolution in the history of medicine, and became as a household word all over the civilized world. The cabalistic S. T.—1860—X. was a talisman of health, and the demand for the PLANTATION BITTERS soon far exceeded the abilities of the proprietors to supply.

Notwithstanding the large importations of St. Croix Rum, made expressly for the compounding of these Bitters, the quantity was inadequate. It therefore became necessary that arrangements upon an expensive scale abroad should at once be made, and an agent was dispatched to St. Thomas for that purpose. He was fortunate in securing and leasing several plantations on some of the largest and most productive estates on the island. Houses, stills, and presses were erected as if by magic, which utterly "astonished the natives." The services of experienced men and natives of the island were procured, and very soon the proprietors of the PLANTATION BITTERS were in a position to supply their laboratory with all the perfectly pure St. Croix Rum needed in manufacturing the GREAT DYSPEPTIC TONIC AND INVIGORATOR. The above cut represents the natives crushing the sugar-cane and otherwise preparing it for the stills and presses.

As an antidote to Fever and Ague, Intermittent and Malarious Fevers, Dyspepsia, and other kindred diseases, the use of the PLANTATION BITTERS is unsurpassed in the history of the world. Over five million bottles are disposed of annually. They are adapted to old and young, male and female. They are agreeable in taste, and always produce an immediate beneficial result.

THE NEW YORK LEDGER,

FOR THE NEW YEAR, 1869.

The Great Family Paper.

The Ledger is the most interesting paper in the world.

More people take the Ledger than any other paper in the country.

It has the largest number of great and distinguished writers.

It contains the purest, sweetest, and most delightful love stories, striking narratives, and instructive biographical and historical sketches.

All questions growing out of the domestic relations, lovers' quarrels, law and business matters, are regularly answered in its columns. A vast amount of useful information is given through this attractive department of the Ledger.

The principal Bishops, Doctors of Divinity, and Clergymen write for it.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, the great American Poet, has translated expressly for the Ledger, a thrilling Spanish Novel, which we shall publish during the new year.

REV. DR. TYNG is now engaged upon an Original Story, which will be continued through twelve numbers of the Ledger.

We are now publishing a series of twelve short true stories, by twelve of the most distinguished clergymen in the United States.

Our standard popular writer, MR. SYLVANUS COBB, JR., is as interesting as ever, and will continue as heretofore to write only for the Ledger.

The millions of admirers of MRS. SOUTHWORTH will find her original stories only in the Ledger.

MISS DUPUY will continue her dramatic stories, and FANNY FERN her sparkling sketches.

HENRY WARD BEECHER will continue to furnish his weekly articles, and JAMES PARTON, his biographical sketches.

ALICE CARY, ETHEL LYNN, DR. CHARLES D. GARDETTE, and all our other present writers are re-engaged for the Ledger.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM HENRY PECK, JOHN G. SAXE, and MARY KYLE DALLAS will hereafter write for no paper but the Ledger.

Two of our contributors have been Ministers to the Court of St. James. Within the past year the son of another of our contributors has been elected President of the United States.

The BEST that a long experience enables us to select, and that money, without stint, can buy, will be constantly spread before the readers of the Ledger.

OUR TERMS FOR 1869.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.
